Caddy's Kiddy Spotted in Cadboro Bay?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Sea Serpent Reporter

The last reported sighting of Cadborosaurus (Caddy) — the sea serpent who periodically makes the rounds of our waters — was August 30, 1967, when he was seen with a convoy of three offspring off Saxe Point.

What looked like one of Caddy's offspring was spotted again today.

Mrs. W. S. Foster, 3773 Waring Place, was the first to see the sea serpent, frolicking around Cadboro Bay, 20 feet off shore.

This was at 8 a.m.

By 8:30 a.m. several of her neighbors were on watch too. They included Mrs. Frank Waring, 3761 Waring Place.

•

Frances Waring says she has lived at Cadboro Bay for 19 years and has never seen anything like this.

"It has to be Caddy's youngster. I've seen too many seals, ducks and other things on the water. He is definitely a sea serpent."

Joan Foster, who has only lived at Cadboro Bay since she came from Vancouver six weeks ago is relieved that she has witnesses to back up what she saw.

"I first saw him two weeks ago but I didn't say anything to anyone then. I thought people would think I was out of my tree!"

An artist, Mrs. Foster says she was just about ready to get down to some painting when she spotted the serpent this morning.

By the time photographer Bill Halkett and I arrived on the scene, the serpent — or whatever it was—was sporting around about 2,000 feet offshore.

Ever since the Times of October, 1933, reported a sighting of Caddy by Major W. H. Langley, clerk of the Legislature of British Columbia, and Fred Kemp of the Provincial Archives, sighters of sea serpents have been subjected to derision by a skeptical society.

People, quite frankly, are inclined to believe they are short-sighted or "nuts," and quite frankly, I've been one of the skeptical.

But the creature we saw this morning was no figment of the imagination. A scoffing newsroom is convinced that our miniature Caddy is a log, trail of kelp, or seal.

Like Mrs. Foster, I'm relieved to have company if I'm to join the ranks of Caddy believers.

The creature that romped, dived and swam along this morning was about five feet in length, a darkish green color, and had a round head that was lizard-like. When it dived it flipped its tail completely out of the water.

Mrs. Waring is convinced, along with Mrs. Foster, that the serpent is one of Caddy's kiddies. They've named him Fidele.

Dr. Clifford Carl of the Provincial Museum has little light to throw on the mystery.

Montreal Terrorized By Night of Violence

SHOOTING VICTIM AIDED by friends is one of Montreal casualties. The city erupted in violence Tuesday when policemen and firemen staged wildcat strike but they are back on the job today. (CP Wirephoto)

Army Stands Guard As Police Return

MONTREAL (CP)—City police and firemen were back at work today but the army continued to guard key locations, including police headquarters, and provincial police cruisers patrolled the streets.

At least two violent deaths occurred in the night when the mob ruled Montreal.

A burglar was shot to death while trying to loot a private dwelling in the west end. Police said Dr. Paul Fircks interrupted a man looting his house and opened fire. The intruder died of chest and stomach wounds.

Soldiers Guard Key Locations

Soldiers remained on guard at city hall, police headquarters, the courts and the television towers atop Mount Royal as city police and firemen returned to their posts.

The scars of mob violence marked the central area of the city following the one-day strike of police and firemen.

Rush-hour traffic began early, as the curious and the worried came in to survey the damage.

On St. Catherine Street between Peel and Bleury, unusually large crowds of people wandered around looking at the scores of damaged storefronts and the loot and trash dumped on to the city's shopping thoroughfare.

In Quebec City, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand called three Montreal officials, executive committee chairman Lucien Saulnier and the leaders of the police and firemen's brotherhoods, Guy Marcil and Andre Plante, to a meeting to ponder the consequences of the strike and the violence, and to pursue a settlement of the wage dispute that lay beneath it all.

Two provincial policemen were critically injured when a mob hauled them out of their car at Metcalfe and St. Catherine Streets and beat them up.

Reports of at least three bomb explosions came in during the night but police were unable to track them down.

Montreal police remained under control of provincial police under an emergency law invoked by the provincial government Tuesday. The measure is effective for 30 days.

Their walkout began at 8 a.m. Tuesday, when almost the entire morning shift left their posts, and was ended Tuesday night by emergency legislation passed by the Quebec national assembly. The special law ordered the strikers to return to work by one minute past midnight.

Police and fire officials said normal operations were restored by 4 a.m.

Thieves Hit Ten Banks

At least 10 bank robberies and nearly a score of thefts in stores, offices and private homes were reported in a rash of criminal incidents during the period the city was without regular police protection.

As night fell, several hundred persons ran wild through Montreal streets, smashing windows with baseball bats, battering automobiles and police cruisers, looting stores whose front windows had been broken, shattering windows in downtown hotels and setting fire to the entrance of an airport limousine service.

The strike began shortly after 8 a.m. when the morning shift of the 3,700-man police force suddenly left their posts to attend a meeting in protest against wage proposals contained in an arbitration report.

They were joined later in the day by fellow officers until about 3,000 men were at the protest meeting in the east-end Paul Sauve Arena. Most of the city's 2,400 firemen, also involved in a wage dispute with the city, went on strike, leaving only a skeleton force on duty.

There were these developments during the hectic strike:

—The provincial government invoked an emergency law placing all police forces in the Montreal region, with its population of more than 2,000,000, under the command of the provincial police general director.

—About 800 provincial police officers were sent into Montreal to replace the 3,700 striking city policemen.

—Three bomb threats were made against city schools. All proved false. The same happened at the city's main post office, which was evacuated at the afternoon rush hour.

—Provincial police asked the public to limit calls to reports of serious accidents, injuries or crimes such as assault, robbery or rape.

—Banks took special precau-

Egypt Will Negotiate If 'Go-Between' Used

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt said today it would accept the so-called "Rhodes formula" for negotiating a peaceful settlement of the Middle East crisis.

A government spokesman said Egypt remains resolutely opposed to any direct talks with Israel. But in reply to questions he said Egypt does not feel a repetition of the 1949 negotiations on the Isle of Rhodes would constitute a direct negotiation with Israel.

In the 1949 talks, Arab and Israeli delegations spoke separately with United Nations mediator Ralph Bunche, who carried proposals and counter-proposals back and forth between the two sides. The talks resulted in the 1949 Holy Land armistice.

The Egyptian spokesman said it would be up to UN Secretary-General U Thant's special envoy for the Middle East, Gunnar Jarring, to decide whether such a method would be useful in his current search for a settlement.

The spokesman added Egypt would continue to insist that any settlement must be based on the UN Security Council resolution of Nov. 2, 1967.

Meanwhile, Israeli jet aircraft attacked two Arab guerrilla bases today near the northeast Jordan town of Irbid and returned safely, the Israeli military command said.

The raids, 22 miles inside the Jordanian border, were among the deepest penetrations of Jordan by Israeli planes since the 1967 war.

A Jordanian military spokesman said in Amman that the jets killed two civilians and wounded six with rocket and machine-gun fire.

Record Interest Rate to Prop Franc

PARIS (UPI) — The Bank of France today raised its discount rate — a key economic regulator — from 7 to a record 8 per cent, the highest in French history.

The move came as the cabinet approved a national budget calling for sharp cutbacks in public spending in a bid to prop up the shaky franc.

Government officials said they hoped the increase in the bank rate would be another major weapon in the fight against inflation threatening to undermine the 12.5 per cent devaluation of the franc on Aug. 8.

The last increase of the bank rate, which will have the effect of making credit more expensive, came June 13 in the middle of the presidential election following the resignation of Charles de Gaulle. Then it was raised from 6 to 7 per cent.

Ruling Dooms Parity Hopes For Local Police Forces

Wage parity between Victoria city and Vancouver city policemen has been ruled out for the second time by the B.C. Mediation Commission.

While Saanich and Oak Bay police cases are yet to be heard by the commission, the decision for Victoria all but rules out any hope of parity for the suburban forces in this area with the mainland.

The commission's decision, announced today, reiterated its decision of last August. The review was requested by the Victoria City Policemen's Union and ordered by Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

The decision is final and binding, under a voluntary agreement between city police and the police commission prior to the dispute going to the mediation commission. There is no legal right to strike.

The Saanich and Oak Bay disputes were referred to the commission for a binding decision by the cabinet under the compulsory arbitration feature of the Mediation Commission Act (Bill 33). The commission will hear these cases later this month.

ARBITRATION INVOKED

Both Saanich and Oak Bay policemen voted unanimously in favor of strike action and compulsory arbitration was invoked two days after this.

The Victoria city police award was for a 14.56 per cent pay raise over two years. A first-class constable earned $620 a month before the raise.

Police union officials complained that the existing pay differential between the mainland and Greater Victoria — $24 a month for first-class constables — would widen to $48 a month considering the mediation commission's higher award for Vancouver city policemen.

Const. Kenneth Horsman, president of the Victoria City Policemen's Union, said this morning the union is disappointed at the decision.

The union felt the decisions were unfair and punitive. The commission wouldn't allow new evidence to be presented, he said.

He said the public should know that local police are

Brothers Asked To Spare a Reply

By BOB MITCHELL

VANCOUVER — Resolutions that passed or failed at the school trustees' convention are useful mainly as a gauge of their feelings on various issues.

Trustees admit they don't expect their proposals to be implemented by the government in legislation—not, at least, for a few years.

Delegates at the 65th annual convention decided Tuesday to ask Education Minister Donald Brothers to reply sooner to their proposals than has been his custom.

It usually takes a year to find out what the minister thinks of the ideas they thrash out on the convention floor, and Peter Bunn of the Greater Victoria board said it was "singularly insulting" to trustees' efforts.

Trustees Favor Bible in Class

Times Staff

Peter Powell, vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, told delegates at the trustees' annual convention here, he was proud of the way they handled themselves during debate on a resolution that could have turned the convention floor into chaos.

Results of the vote on the V a ncouver-sponsored resolution to delete the requirement for religious exercises from the Public Schools Act was 190 against, 108 in favor.

Trustee Fritz Bowers of the Vancouver board said the proposal was not anti-religious, but was put forward because religion exercises represent a "disservice" to children and religious people.

"If you ask teachers and students how it works out, it turns out it's just a sham," Bowers said.

He said the majority of religious leaders in Vancouver supported abolition of the Lord's Prayer and Bible readings from schools when it was proposed earlier this year by the Vancouver board.

Commented a trustee from the Okanagan: "We've managed to get the state out of our bedrooms, and it's about time we got the church out of our schools."

Mrs. Isabel Reader of the Sooke board told delegates they were of a "bunch of hyprocites" for paying lip-service only to Christian values, and added she wanted to see religious exercises thrown out.

ONLY SOLUTION

Saanich Peninsula trustee Jack Armstrong said he favors exposing school children to religious exercises because Christianity is the "only effective solution for living, which has existed for 2,000 years.

"If this is good enough for us, why is it not good enough for our children?"

Fraser Canyon trustee Ed Barry said when he was a juvenile court judge he had observed that only two per cent of young people charged in court had attended church or Sunday school as children, which he interpreted as evidence of the redemptive value of exposure to religious practices.

H. A. J. Monk, from Coquitlam, said classroom Bible readings are the only chance many children have to hear it and said "moral law" contained in the Bible is the source of "moral fibre."

They also passed a proposal urging the minister of education to assess the impact of religious observances on students.

tions, locking their vaults and keeping cash in tellers' drawers to an absolute minimum. In some cases, they closed early.

—Hospitals used private ambulance services to replace police ambulances, which normally handle most of the emergency transportation of sick and injured persons.

LED TO DEATH

—Militant taxi drivers organized a demonstration against Murray Hill Limousine Service Ltd., a long-standing rival, which led to the shooting-death of a provincial police officer and several injuries, the burning of the bus company's headquarters and extensive damage to the city's downtown area. The limousine service has exclusive pickup rights at Montreal International Airport.

—Justice Minister Remi Paul asked the federal government for army and RCMP assistance to keep order, if necessary. From their Valcartier base near Quebec City 120 troops of the Royal 22nd Regiment were brought to St. Hubert, south of Montreal, and placed on standby alert.

Taxi radios were used to rally about 200 taxi drivers for a horn-honking motorcade which took them first to the Paul Sauve Arena, to demonstrate support for the policemen and firemen, and then to city hall and the Murray Hill garage on Barre Street.

City officials were in emergency meetings most of the day at city hall, but Mayor Jean Drapeau was not there until after 9:30 p.m. when he made a quick flight from St. Louis, Mo., where he addressed a trade promotion fair.

At the Murray Hill garage, in a run-down part of the city's lower west-end, demonstrators hurled stones through the windows of the two-storey building and set gasoline fires until they were driven back by shots from the darkened upper storey.

ENRAGED THE CROWD

The shots enraged the crowd, which had been re-inforced by several hundred supporters and thrill-seekers.

While some demonstrators continued to hurl stones at the building, others left the scene and returned with containers of gasoline to make Molotov cocktails.

Between volleys from the sniper inside the building, the demonstrators hurled gasoline bombs at buses parked outside and at the two large doors of the garage.

As the flames from the burning buses and gasoline fires in the street sent huge billows of smoke into the air, the sniper continued to pepper the attackers with gunfire, wounding at least three.

Then two men appeared with high-powered hunting rifles. One methodically shot out the bulbs in four large spotlights on the front of the building, the other climbed to the roof of a building across the street and returned the sniper's fire.

FORCE DOORS OPEN

As nearby residents swigged soft drinks and children darted about, a small group succeeded in breaking through the building's front doors.

A half-dozen firemen struggled to extinguish the burning buses outside, but the demonstrators set fires and smashed property inside the garage. Huge black clouds of smoke rose through drizzling rain as the demonstrators shouted and cheered.

Photographers who attempted to take pictures of the events had their cameras taken from them and smashed to prevent later identification of demonstrators.

The attack on Murray Hill did not end until more than three hours after it began, when about 20 helmeted provincial police officers arrived.

Meanwhile, in Quebec City, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said it was the first time in his 22 years in politics that he had experienced such a situation. He said the strike was "excessively dangerous."

Policemen "charged with enforcing the law" were "denying the law and defying the law."

BILL PASSES QUICKLY

The government bill ordering strikers to return to work or face fines and possible imprisonment was given three swift readings by the national assembly and signed by the lieutenant-governor in the presence of Premier Bertrand, Opposition Leader Jean Lesage and Speaker Gerard Lebel.

But although the strike was coming to an end, the rampage that accompanied it was far from over.

The demonstrating taxi drivers had given way to young members of left-wing and separatist political groups who participate in almost every major demonstration in the city, ready to attack symbols of "capitalism" and "les Anglais—the English."

The youths smashed windows in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel and the International Business Machine building across Dorchester Blvd., then swept west to the Windsor Hotel, site of Mayor Drapeau's posh restaurant Le Vaisseau d'Or—The Golden Vessel.

HURL GARBAGE CANS

Chanting separatist slogans and cheering the crash of broken glass, they hurled garbage cans and pieces of wood through the windows of the restaurant, before rushing on to St. Catherine St., the city's main shopping thoroughfare.

They smashed the windows of banks and stores, stopping occasionally to pluck a piece of merchandise out of a store display, upended potted trees and overturned garbage cans, strewing trash into the street.

Their next target was the Murray Hill offices in the Sheraton Mount Royal Hotel on Peel St., which received the same treatment as other offices and stores along the route.

The mob then moved up Metcalfe St. to McGill University, scene of a protest last March 28 calling for its conversion into a French-language institution.

They stormed onto the campus, wrecking a security guard's booth and smashing windows in several buildings before reaching the university administration building where they broke windows and shattered two glass doors.

By midnight, about five hours after the Murray Hill demonstration began, provincial police were restoring order with the co-operation of the Montreal officers returning to work.

Chemical Limitation For Lakes

OTTAWA (CP) — The International Joint Commission today released a report recommending a long-term program to clean up Lake Ontario, Lake Erie and the international section of the St. Lawrence River.

The price tag to 1978 for the cleanup job was set at $1,001,000,000 for Canada and $7,318,000,000 for the U.S.

The report, prepared by two Canada-U.S. advisory boards for the international agency, suggested a far-reaching program to control phosphorous input into Lakes Erie and Ontario.

The report suggested an "immediate reduction to minimum practical levels" of the phosphorous contents of household and other detergents which pollute the lakes.

Phosphorous compounds in detergents ought to be eliminated entirely not later than 1972.

Other principal recommendations:

—Formation of an international contingency plan to clean up pollution promptly following incidents such as accidental oil discharge.

—Development by Ontario, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan of regulations by 1970 to prevent pollution from oil and gas exportation and production.

—Implementation by 1970 of legislation to control pollution caused by all classes of boats and vessels.

—Implementation by 1972 of co-ordinated programs to control pollution from herbicides and pesticides.

The report said the two lakes studied and the international portion of the river are being polluted on both sides of the boundary to an extent that is causing, and is likely to cause, injury to health and property on both sides.

Nutrients, particularly phosphorous, are going into the waters in such quantities that Lake Erie, particularly the western basin, "is in an advanced state of eutrophication."

Accelerating eutrophication is occurring in Lake Ontario with the effects being carried into the St. Lawrence River, which drains the lake.

Chicago Jittery Over Riot Rumors

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN

CHICAGO (WP) —A jittery Chicago awaits four days of demonstrations and rallies by the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), a faction-ridden radical organization that has chosen the ambiguous slogan, "Bring the war home."

The scenario sketched by SDS spokesmen and literature call for four days of marches, park rallies, organizing actions in high schools, and one project described in a handbill as a women's drive to "destroy" a draft induction centre.

Student members from as far away as Harvard and west coast colleges were reportedly coming to the city and one SDS spokesman has predicted that 5,000 would show up. They will be housed at widely scattered locations in Chicago.

The tension rose considerably after someone late Monday night planted a bomb that blew apart a statue of a 19th century policeman commemorating the Haymarket riot of 1886.

Police were questioning two men who may have seen the bomber, but authorities otherwise indicated they did not know who had planted the explosive.

The statue was blown from the pedestal and the blast shattered windows in nearby buildings.

'WAR' DECLARED

The leader of the Chicago Police Sergeants' Association, an official organization, placed the blame on SDS, calling the explosion a "declaration of war" between the student group and policemen.

"We now feel that it is 'kill or be killed,'" said Sergeant Richard Barrett, "regardless of the Jay Millers, the Daniel Walkers and the so-called Civil Rights Act." Jay Miller is director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Illinois. Daniel Walker is the Chicago attorney who headed a panel which described the 1968 Democratic National Convention disorders as a "police riot."

However, police superintendent James B. Conlisk called Barrett's statement "completely inaccurate" and said "there is no indication that any organization was responsible for the bombing."

VIOLENCE RUMORED

Mayor Richard Daley called the bombing "an attack on all the citizens of Chicago" but did not blame any person or organization.

The explosion added fuel to rumors already swirling here that, in addition to staging public demonstrations, the radical student groups might set off isolated acts of violence.

The only SDS official willing to comment was Jonathan Lerner, the assistant national secretary, who said of the explosion, "we didn't have anything to do with it." Of the Chicago Police Association's statement, Lerner said "The Chicago pigs have now openly declared war on SDS."

Lerner emerged from the national SDS headquarters in a shabby west side building Tuesday afternoon to read a statement for television cameras and then returned inside without answering questions. He called police "pig agents of the murderes who run this country which has long been at war with the black and brown people of the world."

. . . ACTION ASKED

While nothing like a consistent pattern emerged from Tuesday's voting, trustees seem to be striving to reassert their local authority without going out of their way to criticize the government education finance formula, which many consider the heaviest shackle on their fiscal autonomy.

They registered opposition to the principle of submission of operating budgets to referendum, but rejected a proposal to have the finance formula examined by a royal commission.

They also rejected a Greater Victoria proposal to finance education out of general revenue rather than through property taxes, but the idea got three times as many votes as it did two years ago.

SURPRISED

To the surprise of many, a resolution urging the government to take over the entire cost of finanacing regional colleges was defeated.

Under a current agreement, school boards and the government share the cost of operating colleges on a 50-50 basis.

Delegates reacted strongly against a Greater Victoria proposal to have teacher salaries negotiated on a province-wide basis for a two-year period by representatives of the B.C. Teachers Federation and the trustees association.

Wallace Set As Delegate

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace has been named to the Canadian delegation to the Colombo plan conference opening here Oct. 14.

He will be the first member of a Canadian official delegation to a Colombo Plan conference to be named from outside the federal public service.

The appointment, by Premier Bennett at the request of Prime Minster Trudeau, was announced Tuesday by John Hadwen, secretary general for the conference.

Wallace will head the Canadian delegation on the Colombo Plan committee for technical co-operation, Hadwen said.

He added that Wallace will be a valuable member of the delegation because of his experience and special knowledge of pre-conference preparations.

Unwilling to be initiated as a Caddy-believer I checked with Carl to try and get some identification.

Wanting to appear objective, I suggested it could be a wolf eel. "Not likely," said Carl, "wolf eels don't swim along the surface."

He ruled out the seal theory because of the color.

"It probably was a sea elephant. But it's hard to tell from the description."

Joan Foster sketched our mystery creature's likeness. I agree that it tallies with what I saw through the binoculars.

Had it been closer he might have been in line for the $300 award the Times has offered for an authentic photograph of Caddy.

Maybe it's just as well. It would have looked like an "inside job" anyway.

entitled to receive what others are enjoying. Local police don't make enough money to qualify for a National Housing Act house mortgage, but Vancouver area policemen do, he said.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen, speaking as chairman of the city police commission, said the union's disappointment is "quite understandable."

But, he added, it was the police commission which agreed to the police union request that both sides agree to be bound by the mediation commission's decision.

"I can't think the decision was punitive," he said. "The increase compounds to just over 15 per cent."

Stephen said Victoria isn't Vancouver and, without denigrating the local force — "the grandest force in Canada" — he didn't think that economically this area should be asked to support the same wages as Vancouver.

There was also "some justification" in saying that police work is more onerous in Vancouver.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cloud and showers prevailed along the coast overnight behind the system which moved through the south coast Tuesday evening. Rain is still associated with this disturbance as it moves through the interior. A number of thunderstorms were also reported in coastal areas overnight. Some clearing is expected tonight while rain from the next major Pacific system reaches the north coast Thursday afternoon. Temperatures will remain generally a little below normal.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

There probably weren't so many surgeons flying off to Europe and Australia this summer. Information from hospitals indicates that the medical men who preside in the operating room were just as busy at home, if not more so, this summer than ever before.

A quarter-century and more ago, people who needed surgery put it off 'till cool weather, if they could. Most operations, therefore, took place in the fall and winter, and surgeons had nothing much to do in the summer. So they vacationed.

Air conditioning now takes the heat out of the operating room and patients don't perspire so heavily under casts and bandages. And now, in summer, surgeons know how to replace salt and water in appropriate amounts when patients are under great stress after operations. The rate of mortality from summer surgery is much lower.

Hardly a Ripple After Nevada Blast

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — An underground nuclear explosion with a force of up to one million tons of TNT shook Nevada Desert today and sent tremors through tall buildings in this gambling resort.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the 7:30 a.m. PDT blast leaked no radiation into the atmosphere. The intermediate yield test was set off 2,050 feet under the deert floor on Pahute Mesa.

The latest test followed a one megaton hydrogen blast last month that jiggled seismographs from coast to coast. The AEC said today's explosion released energy ranging from 200 kilotons to one megaton.

The Landmark Hotel, 29 stories tall, reported that one sleepy woman called the switchboard to ask if there had been an earthquake but little other reaction was reported.

Seismologists at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif., said they recorded the blast but were unable immediately to calculate its magnitude.

The nuclear test was scheduled originally for Sept. 30 but was postponed because of technical difficulties.

Africans Underline Threat From Apartheid

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Forty-one African governments sent an emissary to the United Nations this week in an attempt to stir world opinion on the continuing problem of colonialism and racial separation of southern Africa.

President Ahmadou Ahidjo of Cameroon, speaking as a representative of the 41-member Organization of African Unity, had the same message for the 126-member General Assembly Monday and at a news conference Tuesday:

—It is more and more notable that the people of the non-African world are accepting the fact that the UN can do nothing about the problem of southern Africa.

—Apartheid—racial separation—and other racial-colonial problems of the area are a danger to world peace and security and, if the world continues to turn a blind eye to them, there will be violence.

It is the first time that Africans have sent to the UN a single spokesman to talk on what to them is one of the most serious problems in the world today.

PRESENTS MANIFESTO

Ahidjo presented to UN members a manifesto on southern Africa that was passed at an OAU meeting of African heads of state last April.

The manifesto demands the right of self-determination for the majority blocks in the Portuguese colonies of Angola and Mozambique, for those in Rhodesia and South Africa, and for South African-controlled South-West Africa.

The message of the manifesto and of Ahidjo was that something must be done by the UN —particularly the big powers— to force South Africa, Portugal and Rhodesia to abide by UN resolutions calling for self-determination.

He warned that if the UN cannot act to bring about self-determination the independent African countries must help liberation movements.

The manifesto calls for an end to NATO assistance to Portugal while she controls the African colonies and for British use of force to overthrow the rebel regime of Ian Smith in Rhodesia.

Ahidjo repeated at his news conference the OAU stand that the Nigerian civil war should be settled by Africans.

A DIME WON'T RENT PHONE BOOTH REFUGE

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A telephone booth is a public place even when it is in use, Provincial Judge Gordon R. Stewart decided Tuesday.

He rejected a suggestion by Gary Joseph Nespolon, 23, of Windsor, charged with being drunk in a public place, who argued that by putting a dime in the telephone he had rented the booth and it was no longer a public place.

"Where did you get your legal training?" Judge Stewart asked, fining Nespolon $15 and costs.

'Shadow Synod' Meet Challenge for Pope

ROME (AP) — The first contingent of radical European priests attending the "shadow synod" this weekend arrived Tuesday night and unveiled a new challenge to Pope Paul.

The priests, all Belgians, showed reporters a 30-page position paper which echoed the urging of Leo Joseph Cardinal Suenens, the primate of Belgium, that the Pope be chosen by all the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church instead of by the College of Cardinals.

"For many people," said the position paper of the Belgian priests, "the Pope is matter for scandal."

"The need for a 'complete reform' of the hierarchical structure of the church has become undeferrable.

"The church must adopt itself to modern life and to the real needs of men, and that means it must become 'more democratic.'

"Every member of the church must be free to express his ideas, while a full and complete responsibility must be given to the local churches."

The statement said the Roman Catholic clergy today is "a dominating caste that seeks the help and support of economic and political powers."

"Like privileged oligarchs and potentates, the priests can help the poor, but never may they appear to be the poor's true companions."

Cardinal Suenens is expected to lead the progressives at the second world synod of bishops, which opens Saturday at the Vatican.

The shadow synod of about 60 dissident priests from eight European countries meets Friday for a week. Many of them met in Chur, Switzerland, in July while European bishops were meeting there and succeeded in capturing some of the spotlight.

The rebel priests also sent a letter to Pope Paul informing him of the character and dates of their meeting and asked him to bless their deliberations.

New Cancer Treatment Emerging

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists have reported first tests showing that white blood cells from a cancer patient can kill that patient's cancer cells. They say the tests might lead to a new way of treating malignancies.

A team of researchers from the University of Washington Medical School said Tuesday they cultured tumor cells from 12 patients with neuroblastoma, a cancer of the nervous system.

When disease-fighting white cells called lymphocytes were taken from the same patients' blood and placed in the culture, they said, the number of tumor cells was reduced 50 per cent.

"The results demonstrate for the first time that live tumor cells taken from a patient and grown in the laboratory can be killed by lymphocytes obtained from the same patients," Dr. George E. Pierce said.

He spoke at a convention of the American College of Surgeons.

Academics Will Dominate PC's Priority Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — About two-thirds of the invited speakers and commentators at the Progressive Conservative policy conference scheduled this weekend in Niagara Falls, Ont., are from Canadian universities and the academic world.

A tentative agenda for the Priorities for Canada Conference listed 64 participants not identified as active members of the party. Of them, 39 were identified with university faculties or other teaching bodies.

Party headquarters also announced that George Davidson, president of the CBC, and Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian radio-television commission, will participate in a special forum on communications. Murray Chercover, president of the privately-owned CTV network, also will participate.

Other prominent names on the conference program include:

One Small Step . . .

IT HAS LONG BEEN EVIDENT that the nuclear nations of the world are not likely to arrive at an overall agreement to ban instantly nuclear weapons of all kinds from their arsenals; there will be no set date to which future generations may look back as the decisive turning point in mankind's retreat from the brink.

Nuclear disarmament clearly is going to be a process of slow and painful negotiation, of bargaining in specific areas. Thus it is that the latest draft nuclear agreement, which would exclude "the sea bed, the ocean floor and the subsoil thereof from the arms race" should be greeted as a promising step forward along the road to total nuclear arms control.

In the broad sweep of nuclear capability, prohibition of nuclear devices on the sea bottom is a relatively minor achievement—and even this, with United States and Russian agreement, has yet to be accepted by the 25-nation disarmament conference and go through the various acts of ratification.

While submarines can still prowl the depths carrying lethal loads of nuclear missiles to be fired at will, banning stationary weapons takes care of only part of the problem. However, this must be considered not so much in the light of its military effect, but as a part of the general psychological advance. With most of the ocean depths now exempted from use as parking places for instruments of mass destruction, the field is at least being narrowed.

It is a sad commentary on the real posture of the nuclear giants that even as their spokesmen reached agreement on this item, experts in both countries were busy developing larger and more lethal nuclear weapons for use in the air. The United States pursues the ABM program, slightly limited though it may be from the vast form in which some authorities wish to see it; and the Soviet Union continues with its own type of ABM and with MIRV, the multiple attack missile.

Against these additions to the world's nuclear over-kill capability, the seabed victory is a modest one indeed. It will be only when negotiation on surface weapons begins in earnest, spurred by the knowledge that all mankind is a hostage to threatened destruction, that significant progress will be made.

And when that step is achieved, if ever, we must consider that the most populous country in the world, mainland China, is not a party to such international agreements—indeed, does not yet have a participant's voice in global movements.

A powerful nuclear-armed China, hostile, intransigent, and able to deliver missiles anywhere in the world, is a prospect that should send the existing nuclear nations into hurried consultation, and cause urgent advances to Peking to play its part in safeguarding the world. The longer the delay, the more difficult it will be to undo what is being done.

As the Councils Shrink

NORTH COWICHAN'S MAYOR Donald Morton, retired president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, notes the trend toward—and the benefits of—regional government, and forecasts the eventual replacement of municipal councils by this new level of administration. The mayor makes the point that some services clearly lend themselves to amalgamation in order to cover more than municipal areas and that as the gradual takeover occurs, the need for local councils diminishes. "We should work with the trend rather than against it," he says.

The case is familiar to those who have considered the amalgamation issue in Greater Victoria over the last third of a century. Amalgamation has, in fact, taken place here in such fields as education, health services and parkland acquisition. There are other functions to which it is particularly suited. Their inclusion under area administration seems inevitable.

The prospect invites study of the composition of regional boards. In Greater Victoria, councils choose from their own membership the representatives they will place on the board. Unorganized districts have members elected directly by their constituents. The municipal representatives are one step removed from their own electorate, since they are not voted into council to be members of the regional board, but are chosen by their colleagues for that purpose.

Counterbalancing the partial independence of municipal representatives is their responsibility to their own councils. When they endorse regional borrowing, for instance, they cannot overlook the effects it might have on the ability of their councils to borrow in the competitive money market. And if they neglect, or appear to neglect, municipal council interests, they can be disciplined by the municipal voters when they next stand for election. In financial matters, moreover, there is an additional safeguard for the electors. Before any borrowing can be undertaken by the regional board, it must be endorsed by the ballots of local voters.

In the course of time, if Mayor Morton's apparently logical assumption proves correct and there ceases to be a need for local councils, regional board members could be elected directly.

The situation, as it exists in the interim, leaves two forms of administration in jurisdictions which overlap. While experience in Greater Victoria indicates that they can co-exist amicably in most instances, likelihood of regional government supplanting individual councils is a prospect councils should not ignore. At present the councils have a qualified ability to determine how joint services should be administered. They, can, to a degree, chart the evolution of regional government. But their time may be limited. Recognition of that fact should be a major factor in eliminating parochial approaches.

Ships and Costs

STUDIES MADE BY THE JAPAN Shipbuilders Association indicate that the capacity of ship-building nations to expand their plants will not keep pace during the next three or four years with the world demand for shipping, but that, as far as Japan is concerned, the resulting sellers' market may not be as attractive as present conditions indicate.

At the end of last year Japan enjoyed an advantage in competing against other nations in construction of vessels. In the years ahead, however, that country looks forward to rising costs of labor and material that could injure its competitive position. According to the Japanese association, costs in such countries as Sweden and West Germany are likely to rise at only half the pace of those in Japan—hence the prospect of a relative decline in Japan's ability to outrun its competitors.

The outlook can have only limited interest here. Victoria yards have shown their capacity to turn out excellent vessels. But excellence in local production has found no springboard to overcome the price hurdle. Now, it appears, some of the economic woes which have afflicted the industry in Victoria are about to make themselves felt in modified degree in the surging economy of Japan.

FOOLS' GOLD ON THE PRAIRIES — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

A Too Easy Answer From City Folk

SEEN from an airplane in these drowsy October days, just before the long winter sleep, the Prairies are an endless linoleum floor, each oblong tile neatly fitted as by an expert -- the yellow fields of stubble, the black fields of fallow, in monotonous rectangular pattern. It is a comforting sight for any Canadian, so long as he is six miles above it.

Hutchison

Like King Midas' gold, the nation's enduring treasure lies spread across a thousand miles from the Lakes to the Rockies. But the hoard of golden grain, though edible and rich in nutriment, cannot be eaten at home or sold to a hungry world. The Prairies, once the carefree frontier of opportunity, the end of the weary march for countless daring men and patient women, have graduated into the contemporary age at last. They have received the imprimatur and final sanction of modern society. They have become a Problem.

This is not however, the sort of Problem usually discussed by the Economic Council of Canada and the mandarins of Ottawa who never soil their hands in the western earth. It is not the familiar Problem of unskilled labor, inefficient machinery and low productivity.

In literal fact the labor force of the Prairies is just as skilled as any crew on the industrial assembly line, the wheat industry just as efficient as General Motors, its product more useful than automobiles, and in his work the farmer deals with a process, from seed to harvest, more complicated and mysterious than nuclear fission. He deals with life itself.

Knows His Trade

After a century of trial and error, this man knows his trade. He has mastered his brutal climate, his stubborn soil, and its ultimate product, the essential food of human kind. If there is a Problem the farmer did not make it. He merely obeyed the instructions of the all-wise state and grew more and more wheat which the state undertook to sell and cannot sell, even though the ill-nourished millions through-out the world are eager to consume it.

No, the problem is not in this earth, in the farmer's methods or in his machinery. It is solely in the machine of world distribution which has suddenly broken down under the weight of mismanagement. It is the local result of the world-wide madness which makes great nations fight one another, with military or economic weapons, like shipwrecked sailors in a sinking lifeboat.

But the Canadian nation as a whole is not much interested in the Prairie Problem. After all, it says, wheat forms only a fraction of the gross national product nowadays, a diminishing fraction. The farm population is dwindling, too, and has few votes in national elections. Besides, the Problem doubtless will be solved one way or another, and even if it is not solved the nation can still prosper from its other resources.

So let the farmer survive as best he may under the iron law of economics. Let him grow less wheat, for example, and raise more cattle — an obvious and easy solution.

Thus speaks the voice of authority in Ottawa, the voice of the traveller in the first-class compartment of a jet plane, over a glass of champagne freely provided with the compliments of Air Canada, the voices of all the comfortable folk in Winnipeg and the other Prairie cities who live mainly on the farmer's toil.

From a Distance

Thus speaks the age-old equation which holds that the middle-man, the promoter and the bookkeeper, not the producer, the craftsman and the artist, shall have the lion's share of any society's rewards.

Looking down from the plane at some cottage behind its frail windbreak of trees, still green but soon to be naked skeletons in the winter wind, the traveller can imagine the farmer and his wife at their dinner table as they hear the distant voices. What are they to make of all this sound advice?

How are they to grow cattle where they have always grown wheat? How are they to live for several years until the calves, if the calves can be bought, grow into marketable steers? Have the city folk thought of these things, the cold drudgery of feeding cattle in the snow, the cost of raising beef, the price that somehow slips through the farmer's hands and all the sudden disruption of his life?

Solving Own Problems

The men and women in all those tiny houses, scattered like children's toys across the linoleum floor, are pondering such questions in this autumn of fool's gold. They ponder and they will solve the Problem in due time, as they always have, even in the early times of the sod house and in the late times of the great drought.

They will solve it because they know that if the whole apparatus of the world economy is out of joint, nevertheless the prairie earth still remains here, sleeping through the winter but awakening in urgent growth every spring — a permanent asset, a treasure beyond reckoning and sure to last long after man's current follies have been outlived and forgotten.

FROM NEW HAVEN, CONN. — By CHARLES BARTLETT

Respect for a Tough Head at Yale

THE reaction to Yale's president, Kingman Brewster, who is opposing the notion that colored students deserve a role in the management of their institutions, suggests that rationality may be coming back into style at least on this campus. Brewster took his position, which runs boldly against the thrust of the student movement, in unequivocal words ten days ago and the reaction here, and apparently elsewhere in academia, has been surprisingly acquiescent. He may well have spiked a trend that has gathered momentum in many universities.

Bartlett

He argued for democracy without representation in college life. He said a university can be accountable to its students and responsive to their attitudes without yielding them fixed roles in the decision process. He wants to bring the governing boards closer to the students, not by putting students on the boards but by bringing deliberations into the open.

The trouble with representative democracy, in Brewster's view, is that a small handful of activists will seize the representative roles which are made available without necessarily representing the majority of students. Symbolic representation can have no real meaning in a day when student interests are varied and a very few will spend the time these governing boards require.

Scattergun Activity

Like Robert Browning's Duchess, whose quote, "looks went everywhere", Yale students are backing so many causes and engaged in so many fronts that they are unlikely, when the dust settles, to have much time left to run the college. "Governance" must take its place alongside the Vietnam moratorium, the campaign for welfare moms, the stress of studies and other diversions in bidding for attention.

Many bright minds across the nation have been dwelling on the redistribution of university authority because it seemed to be inevitable. Dr. Gallup found that over 80 percent of all students want to be represented in policy making and many administrators have assumed that peace without student participation could not long endure.

Not Easily Shared

But power is not easily shared in these complex institutions where the balance of power among the administrators, faculty, and students is so uneasy. The faculties are jealous of the administrators but they don't want their duties. The faculty leaders are dulled by their necessity to avoid offending faculty factions. The issue of participation was originally raised by teachers and they may in the end be responsible for its interment.

Since it will never be possible to yield students much more than an illusion of power in university decisions and since the illusion will quickly be branded hyprocisy, it seems wiser to do as Brewster proposes and make the management more compact instead of more representative so it can adjust swiftly and wisely to pressures for change.

Students Impressed

In fact Brewster's performance testifies more eloquently than his words that strong presidential leadership, communicative and flexible, may be the best answer to the tensions in campus life today. He has capped the students' turbulence and caught their respect by going with them when their positions were reasonable and balking when they weren't. He has thus far managed to channel the revolution.

The admiriration for Brewster on the Yale campus seems almost phenomenal. Militant Negro seniors boast of his sangfroid in rugged dealings over black studies. Many want to run him for public office. They hope his call for a review of his tenure in 1971 may be the prelude to a political race in 1972. They want to expand his power instead of impinging it.

Ambitions Unknown

Brewster, who counts himself a liberal Republican, supplies no clue to his ambitions. He has made no moves, shown no disposition to draw close to President Nixon or to temper the toughmindedness which some criticize as arrogance. He has said little on Vietnam or any public issues that do not relate to the campus.

But Yale cannot be blamed for hoping. It has not produced a president since William Howard Taft.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of Oct. 8, 1909.

Victoria Theatre patrons will have for their entertainment this evening the musical extravaganza The Cat and the Fiddle, with lyrics and music by Carleton Lee Colby and a presenting company exceeding 40 performers. There will be extravaganzas, pantomimes, musical comedy presentations and scenic displays of gorgeous hue. The varied program will also include marvellous feats of illusion and a chorus of considerable beauty.

Letters

Letters will be considered for publication only if the writer is clearly identified to the editor, who may permit pen names at his discretion. Submissions will be edited and may be condensed. Short letters are favored. None will be returned.

Paying More Now

In recent days there have been several reports that Dr. Gordon Shrum is predicting an increase in hydro rates. How many of the consumers know that on the change from one month reading to the new savings of two months there have been cases of considerable increase in the amount to be paid for the amount consumed? The previous rates for "residential" under schedule 1101 for the month were the first 300 k.w.h. at 2.5 cents and the remainder at 1 cent. The new rates are the first 600 k.w.h. at 2.5 cents and the remainder at 1 cent. The following figures of power used in my home last December and January were discussed with a hydro official who insists there has been no increase:

Schedule 1101 one month meter reading from 12 day of 12th month to 15th day of 1 month — consumption 4043 k.w.h. which was billed as — 300 at 2½ cents—$7.50; 3743 at 1 cent—$37.43; total bill of $44.93 and tax.

Under today's rates of two months readings same consumption would be 600 at 2½ cents—$15.00, 3443 at 1 cent—$34.43 making a total of $49.43 and tax, and showing an increase of cost of $4.50. The hydro still insists, of course, that there has been no increase in rates. This is for an electrically heated home. —A Homeowner of Victoria.

Persecuted Majority

A great deal of attention is paid to the claims of minority groups of all kinds and any suggestion of opposition to these claims is immediately countered by charges of inhumanity, lack of compasssion, etc.

Let me put forward a claim for the consideration of the rights of the persecuted majority of useful, working, independent, paying members of society. They are the people to whom those in need must turn for help and yet our news media show us daily the spectacle of the dependent demanding help and backing up their demands by threats. Consider the blatant incitement to violence made by Walter Olszewski, president of the Low Income Group (quoted in The Times, October 2nd, 1969):

"If you don't start giving us more, your cities are going to be burned down. And, so help me God, I'll be lighting the match."

I wonder what the reaction would be if a bus driver stood up in a public meeting and made the same statement — or a shop assistant, or a teacher, or a farmer, or a policeman!

By what right are such demands and threats made with impunity! Apparently by the fact of dependence or incompetence.

The latest and most obnoxious of these demands (made on behalf of the "poor" by our government) is the negative income tax. If a man, or woman, can get $1,000 a year by not working, what incentive does he or she have to work for an annual income of say, $1,200? — Robert Orr, Mill Bay.

Instinct Won't Take You There

By COLMAN McCARTHY

Reports from high schools and colleges this fall say that more students than ever have signed up for courses in creative writing.

Some colleges, as creative as their creative writing students, offer it as a major to meet the growing market among young people thirsting to write.

Apparently, writers symbolize a currently fashionable style of freedom: they need not suffer the nine-to-five martyrdom, they can make their own game plan, they can hole up in the East Village with other writers or in the inevitable Big Sur commune with neighbors like Henry Miller, they can be involved in the great issues by using their words to move the movers.

Healthy Illusion

The illusion of a writer enjoying such enormous freedom is not one the writing courses will break in a year, even if it is desirable that they should.

This is the healthy illusion of young people who have yet to face the social enslavements of earning a living, getting on with the neighbors —even a happy one like Henry Miller — paying taxes, facing death.

The more dangerous illusion that a good writing course will try to shatter is that creative writing is teachable. Writing is; creating isn't. The most a writing course can do is expose the future writer to rules, techniques, habits, styles and ideas that make it easier to be taught by oneself, not by another, how to create.

Having oneself for a teacher in an art like writing is not the folly it would be in one of the sciences or social disciplines, because the first and deepest fact about writing is that it should come from within. The within of a writer is the only source of style that belongs to him and no one else.

interior life is a real life," the difficulty of many people who try to write is that they have never seized possession of their interior life.

As a result, what they put on paper, and perhaps slip past an editor, is not writing but only notes on experience or memos from the brain. They are secretaries, not writers.

'Art Is Work'

Before anything else a "work of art is work." No one who has ever seen a writer trying to join passion, clarity and style with a selection from the 11 million words in the English language could fail to see the trying labor of it.

No one ever spent a harder day's work that Oscar Wilde when he came from his room beat and sweaty, saying, "I spent all morning putting in a comma and all afternoon taking it out."

Flaubert had the same agony. "I have just spent a good week," he wrote to a friend midway in "Madame Bovary," "alone like a hermit and calm as a god. I abandoned myself to a frenzy of literature. I got up at midday, I went to bed at four in the morning; I have written eight pages."

The emphasis is his, or maybe his spirit's; any martyr that worked a week to write eight pages must have had a spirit that wouldn't be quiet.

BALDWIN

Writing is like walking blindfold: instinct will carry you far, but not always where you want to go. Before long, the instinct-guided writer, like the blinded walker, bumps into things.

Like the hard question of when to write. Everyone knows that Hemingway liked to write in the morning, Mark Twain when he was lying down, H. L. Mencken when he sniffed a deadline and Norman Mailer whenever he gets punched in the mouth.

Many who have yet to be terrorized by the writer's natural enemy, the blank page, say the time to write is when you feel like it. But feelings are unreliable, a roving muse who will not become a kept muse. Other methods must be found.

One letter-writer who did not depend on the I-write-when-I-fell-like-it impulse was the late Flannery O'Connor, whose short stories are among the best in the language. "Every morning between nine and 12," she once told a group of students, "I go to my room and sit before a piece of paper. Many times, I just sit for three hours with no ideas coming to me. But I know one thing: If an idea does come between nine and 12, I am there ready for it."

What Is Style?

What is least understandable about writing is style. Even after it is acquired, style is almost impossible to define, unless, vaguely, it is the way a writer gets language to enjoy itself. But even here, the enjoyment is relative.

Readers found style 300 years ago in the line of Moliere, "The greater the obstacle, the more glory we have in overcoming it."

How does one get style in his writing? One answer is in the remark a few years ago of Katherine Anne Porter, whose stories in "Noon Wine" and "Pale Horse, Pale Rider" flow with pure language.

"The style is you," she said. "Oh, you can cultivate a style, I suppose, if you like. But . . . it remains a cultivated style. It remains artificial and imposed, and I don't think it deceives anyone. In the end, you do not create a style. You work, and develop yourself; your style is an emanation from your own being."

Sooner or later, people who write must face the question: What do I do with what I have just put to paper?

Publish it, says one person. Send it to a friend, says another. Put it in a drawer, says an Emily Dickinson.

But the writer who wants his words to live for more than a day neither publishes, mails or buries what he has just written; instead, he rewrites it. With the kind of courage that only he will know about, he cuts whatever words are useless or false, whatever thoughts are vague or stale.

Allergic Editor

He reads it over and over like a sniffling editor who has an allergy to weak language. He asks questions: Is this really worth writing, have I said it well, will it stand in print as well as it stands in my ego? If the answers are yes to the hard questions, he has learned a basic fact: Writing is rewriting what you have already rewritten.

Many who make their living by writing keep a kind of freshman innocence about them and never lose amazement at not only seeing their words in print but also being paid for it.

Yet the real payment is not in money. In 1944, a Hollywood agent wrote to Sean O'Casey, promising the Irish playwright $100,000 if he would come do a screenplay.

Sarcastically snorting that the offer "was a temptation for more than an hour" before he remembered what Hollywood was, O'Casey later wrote: "In spite of powers thrusting big money before an author for work he doesn't want to do . . . it is better for him to go his own way, even if it be with a limp. It is not a happy way, but it is his only way if he wishes to remain true to himself and right with God."

True and right, also, with the people who may be moved or lightened by his words. Because they are the ones with whom he shares his inner life.

That Civil Service Cutback Puts the Capital in Dither

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

On a recent Saturday, only 17,000-odd fans in the capital watched the Ottawa Roughriders beat Edmonton.

Why so much less than a capacity audience? We heard radio reporters explaining it: Local cable TV carrying the game by way of a Montreal station, a gloomy weather forecast; the opening of the duck-hunting season; a surfeit of football success; and — don't laugh — the civil service panic.

The government work force and its dependants must include 65 percent of the population of greater Ottawa. It is understandable that the media in Ottawa explodes when there's a major change for the civil service.

Six weeks ago Prime Minister Trudeau gave the country and Ottawa fair warning. He indicated a cut of 25,000 in the federal bureaucracy, to be achieved in two years. Last week the consequences of his determination began to unfold and literally thousands of Ottawans are in a panic.

It is easy for outsiders to dismiss such ripples of fear. Outside the capital, civil servants are neither numerous nor concentrated enough to swing much public sympathy. A widespread contempt has built up about civil servants.

Their image is of waste, timeserving, laziness, red tape, inefficiency, short hours, complete security, little pressure, etc.

Anyone can find, as we have found, situations which confirm each aspect of this image. And to the contrary, we have also noted many civil servants who work hard, beyond normal hours, with an admirable dedication, within many efficient branches, sections, and agencies.

The instructions are simple enough: Each department is required to live within its published 1969-70 estimates in the year 1970-71. This requires them to absorb the salary increases recently granted.

Each department establishes for itself the level of manpower it wishes to employ but it must be funded within last year's financial allocation.

A department can fight back against such cuts by appealing to the Treasury Board but it must prove in its appeal that the manpower cuts made to keep below the financial ceiling will cripple work which government policy has given a high priority. We understand there will be few appeals. The ministers and their deputies believe Mr. Trudeau is serious.

The opposition (e.g. John Diefenbaker) has declared that the cuts are "brutal" and "callous." The CLC is wrought up. The unions of government employees are enraged.

They have been consulted about the general policy by the Treasury Board. Apparently they believe that normal attrition (7.5 to 10 per cent a year) would be the chief means of meeting the ceilings. Liberal MPs who represent all the region's seats are distraught.

John Carson, chairman of the Public Service Commission, is a key man in the situation. He says that the belief that normal attrition would take care of the cuts has been "absolutely misleading . . . it just doesn't work out that way."

Will the protests stop the government?

Our rough estimate is that one in every 30 federal employees will be fired or retired early. Further, few new people will be hired and bargaining for further salary increases will become much tougher.

This hardly seems a general disaster, however much it may hurt the six to eight thousand people who lose jobs.

Our first point is that previous "freezes" in the Diefenbaker and Pearson years did not lead to firings. We've had nothing as widespread as this in Ottawa since the '30s and R. B. Bennett.

The second point is unsettling in humane terms: It seems the over-60s in the lower jobs will be the prime target for cuts.

The third point ties in with a practice common in private business but not in government: Each employee's file and record is to be examined, establishing a comparative merit record for him with his peers; those at the bottom of the list will be the ones let go.

We received anonymously the instructions sent this month from the deputy minister of trade and commerce to his executives.

A few quotations show the thoroughness of the winnowing process which, in the estimate of this department, will cut out 71 permanent employees almost at once.

Quote: "It should be recognized that certain needed talents have yet to be recruited and that, apart from normal attrition, some present staff will have to be released to permit recruitment." This means the re-assessment and pressure will continue for months.

Quote: "In determining the employees to be laid off, the regulations require the assessment of all employees in positions of the same occupational nature and level . . . to determine those who least meet the requirements of the continuing positions.

"The employees in this group are placed on lay-off lists, in order of merit. Lay-off procedures should not be used to deal with under-performers unless the function performed by the under-performer is being voided."

In a little over two weeks Parliament returns. The country has a very tough Prime Minister. If he doesn't give ground before then on the firings, his second session will begin in a heated atmosphere, much different than last year's. We think he'll stand firm.

90 Million People, That's Toll So Far

(An editorial by the Board of Evangelism of the United Church.)

The international Red Cross estimates that wars this century alone have already killed 90,000,000 people. The world's nations have spent some $2,000 billion on armaments in the 20th century, and 130 wars and conflicts on five continents have caused damage several times this amount.

It is indeed a sorry record for modern man who considers himself the wisest and most civilized of the world's creatures, who truly believes he is one better than his forebears of past centuries.

Despite the repeated warnings of the past seven decades, the world is moving toward the 1970s with the basic question of disarmament far from resolved. On the contrary, in the fearsome arsenals of the super powers, weapons of mass destruction are piling up at an alarming rate.

Annual defence expenditures by the great powers and other nations are heading toward the $200 billion mark, so it will take barely another decade to double that total the world has spent on arms and on keeping enemies away.

Unless the arms race is halted, future generations may well look back to those 90,000,000 killed in 70 years not with horror, but with some surprise.

For if ever the super powers start hurling their nuclear weapons, far more than 90,000,000 probably will be killed in the first hours of the next global war.

Today, the United States and the Soviet Union already have thousands of atomic warheads and intercontinental missiles which can be fired at a moment's notice.

For mankind to keep racing along this path is not just dangerous. It is insanity.

Just Watching All The Grilse Go By

By ART STOTT

The 10-year-old from Masset, who has jigged halibut too big for him to hold, has already developed the quiet patience of a competent angler. As we trolled the other morning off Trial on water riffled by a breeze carrying the nip of October, he talked undemonstratively of fishing trips with his grandfather in the Queen Charlottes. It was man-to-man conversation, dealing at one point with a favorite Crocodile lure he had lost on a too-light lead to an oversized trout, at another, rough seas in the inlet when a big wave had tossed their small boat around so that his grandfather came back off the centre thwart to land in his lap. For his age, he's well informed on boats and fishing.

Stott

To meet legal requirement as much as to provide protection, he was wearing an orange colored life-preserver. That equipment and his size probably moulded the opinion apparently formed by the federal fisheries man who drew up beside us in his fast boat. The official seemed to presume that we represented a grandfather, or father and small son on the latter's first fishing expedition.

"How's the fishing?" he asked.

"For me, it isn't," I told him.

"If you happen to catch any small grilse," he said, "shake 'em off. Don't take a chance on keeping them, even if it's the boy's first fish. There a lot of small grilse around and the regulations say they have to be released." He peeled off with a benign smile.

We said nothing. Not having had a bite or seen a fish, we had no qualms.

But the incident set me thinking about the regulations which fix a limit of four fish per person and make it an offence to take a grilse under 12 inches.

The argument for the effort to provide this partial protection for grilse seems, on the surface, sound. Grilse are small. Spared a year, they can, in some cases, develop into good eight to 10-pound fish. Why, then, kill a grilse and eliminate a salmon which would be a better trophy and might, with great luck, even escape to spawn? The point is also made that the increase in the number of sports fishermen is so great that they must be considered a significant depletion agency.

So far, so good. But if this conservation measure is effective, where are the progeny of salmon that once provided an abundance of fish off Trial Island in the days of my boyhood? The authorities say there are many factors which have reduced them in number—use of insecticides adjacent to natal streams, obstructions in rivers, the heavy haul of commercial fishermen who, at least in netting, have no way of shooing off grilse, and so on. This also is probably true, but again, where are the fish that are protected by grilse regulations?

Some of my informed friends tell me that a grilse which has taken a hook has small chance of survival. Apart from injury that may have been caused by the hook, they explain, the fish may perish through disturbance of its slime coating in handling. There is also a theory that a fish, fighting a hook, undergoes a change in body chemistry that is either fatal or so debilitates it that it is easy prey for other natural predators. I'm waiting for the fisheries officials to convince me that my informed friends are wrong.

The next point of argument is personal but could apply to any number of people who fish as I do. During the calendar year my regular fishing partner and I have probably been on the water well over a score of times, dragging lines. In that time we've caught perhaps a dozen grilse ("keepers," of course), one jack and a salmon. We're the kind of unsuccessful fishermen who justify the astronomical price per pound Al Wright places on salmon caught by anglers.

It would be legally acceptable for me to catch four fish a day for 365 days in the year. (Stop comparing my catch record with the legal possibility and quit laughing.) Instead of 1,460 fish a year, I've picked up a score, most of them beneath salmon size.

By my arithmetic, that means that two of us take about one seventy-third of my individual allowable quota. That's a statistic only a conservationist could love.

But if, on some crazy day, I should catch and keep five salmon of all sizes, or one grilse that measured only 11⅞ inches—and were picked up by a fisheries patrol—I'd be declared guilty of an offence. Should I want to defend myself against resulting charges, chances are I'd have to appear in court at Sidney or Sooke, which is something less than convenient. Better I should rob a bank and receive the treatment and solicitude accorded a real criminal.

★ ★ ★

As a part-time pragmatist, I can't argue against a policy that actually saves small fish to become big fish and assures perpetuation or increase in the run—an increase which should show up in my catches of salmon for the small ones I have released. The principle is fine, if it works. For me, any vestige of proof that it does work off the point of Trial is lacking, and I'm figuratively left standing on the corner watching all the grilse go by.

Damage Hits $300,000 in Alaska As Freak Windstorm Blows Through

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Winds up to 80 miles an hour and sometimes higher buffeted Cordova and Anchorage late Monday and caused an estimated $300,000 damage.

A dozen persons were reported injured.

Gov. Miller said initial damage estimates were $200,000 in Cordova and the balance in the Anchorage area.

A two-storey warehouse in Cordova collapsed, a plane flipped over at a small airport, a helicopter was blown into Eyak Lake, and some small boats in drydock were blown off their cradles. A few sheds and garages were flattened, and minor damage to dwellings was reported.

In Anchorage, six house trailers were destroyed and more than 60 others damaged. At least five planes were damaged.

Murder Jury Hears Police Testimony

An RCMP constable told in Assize Court Tuesday how a man came to the police office at Colwood and said:

"I killed my wife by gassing her in the car. She's outside now."

Constable Armand Lachapelle said he went outside and there was a woman lying on the front seat of the car.

"I went back inside and told Constable Mason: 'This gentleman has just killed his wife. She is out side in the car.' "

Constable Lachapelle was giving evidence at the trial of Lawrence Ernest Munning, 41, charged with the non-capital murder of his wife, Catherine Josephine Munning, 36.

He said Munning came to the station at about 5:10 p.m. on June 2. He was calm and cooperative, answered all questions asked of him and, except for a slight smell of alcohol, seemed entirely sober.

EXAMINED BODY

Dr. J. S. P. Lane testified that he went to the Colwood station soon after receiving a message from the RCMP and examined the woman in the car.

"I tried external heart massage without effect," he said. "I was satisfied by ordinary examination that she was dead but I wanted a second opinion."

Defence counsel Brian R. D. Smith asked Dr. Lane if he wanted a second opinion because he thought Mrs. Munning was still "just alive and capable of being revived."

"I thought she was dead," Dr. Lane replied, "but modern resuscitation equipment is much better now than it was 10 years ago and occasionally people are revived these days."

He called Dr. A. C. R. McGonigle and, he too, examined Mrs. Munning.

"I was satisfied she was dead." Dr. McGonigle testified. "Her skin was pink, rather than blue and this indicated she had been exposed to carbon monoxide."

The trial continued today. It is being heard by a jury of three women and nine men with Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan presiding. E. George MacMinn is crown counsel, assisted by John B. Goult.

Topless Banned

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday a regulation banning topless waitresses and nude men and women performers in restaurants and other eating places throughout the county. Los Angeles County has been one of the most flourishing districts for restaurants featuring topless waitresses. Many of the restaurants are trying to register as nightclubs to get around the ban.

Saanich Senior Citizen Home Plan Approved

New plans for low-rental accommodation for old people in Saanich were approved unanimously Tuesday night at a closed-door meeting of the municipal housing committee.

The planned 90 units of bachelor and one-bedroom suites have been trimmed to 81 with a much improved design, committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning and Mayor Hugh Curtis said after the meeting.

The project, initiated by Saanich three years ago, was stalled last May when council rejected three building proposals by private companies, terming them unsuitable.

Asked when construction might start at the site, adjacent to Hampton Park in the Tillicum district, Mayor Curtis said "I would make a stab — late winter or early spring."

Costs to Be Shared

The accommodation is being built in conjunction with federal and provincial authorities. Capital cost is provided 75 per cent by the federal government and 25 per cent by the provincial government.

The three earlier proposals for construction were priced between $518,057 and $653,139.

The committee's approval now will be transmitted to the B.C. Housing Management Commission. A technical committee will iron out details.

Mrs. Gunning said the units are well planned, that the over-all building is a good design, and is molded well to the site.

Curtis said the improved design meant the five-month delay was "very well worth it. Badly needed as the accommodation is, we were not prepared to accept something which was unsuited."

After Saanich rejected the first proposals last May, the B.C. Housing Management Commission was asked to approach the architectural division of the provincial public works department to prepare plans along certain lines. These plans were presented to and approved by the municipal housing committee.

Tax Arrears Charge

Curtis also said the plans will be referred to the three companies which made the earlier proposals and they will be asked to resubmit prices, based on the new plans.

Finance committee will recommend to council that seven per cent be added to tax arrears, starting Jan. 1, instead of the present six per cent. About 95 per cent of Saanich taxes are paid on time, avoiding interest rate penalties.

A bid from the Racquet Club of Victoria for a grant of tax relief was shot down when the committee recommended against it, citing the club as a private one which charges $800 membership initiation.

Fire committee agreed to try and continue this summer's home inspection program into the winter. The committee chairman, comptroller-treasurer and fire chief were appointed to find ways of doing this.

Chief Joseph Sutherland said 1,569 houses have been called on. Of these, 909 were inspected, no one was at home at 596 and 64 householders declined an inspection of their premises. Of the 909 houses inspected 759 were satisfactory.

Better Priority System Urged Against Inflation

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — R. L. Sheard, executive vice-president and general manager of the Bank of Montreal, says all levels of government must evolve a better system of priorities and more efficient administration to combat inflation.

He told a meeting of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association Tuesday that "very large" increases in government spending in recent years have been a major contributor to inflationary pressures.

Mr. Sheard described as "staggering" an 18-per-cent increase in spending at all government levels in 1966, as well as 11-per-cent increases in both 1967 and 1968.

In 1969, despite Ottawa's program of restraint, federal spending will grow by 10 per cent, he said.

"The federal government's move to a budgetary surplus this year has taken substantial pressure off the capital market but ... this surplus is being achieved primarily through increased tax revenues and not yet by a significant cutback in over-all expenditures."

PRICES SOARING

Mr. Sheard said he based his observations on an Economic Council report which said Canada had the potential to achieve a gross national product of $100,000,000,000 by 1975 if there is no more than a two-per-cent annual increase in prices with a maximum of three per cent unemployment.

However, in 1969 general price increases have been close to five per cent and the unemployment rate is five per cent.

He urged labor to realize that it is in its interest to exercise self-restraint in wage and benefit demands.

Wage settlements have risen about eight per cent annually and increases built into two and three-year contracts ensure that the situation will be maintained, he said.

Mr. Sheard said he doubted that government controls on wages would be appropriate or effective, but mentioned several demands which he said could only add fuel to inflationary fires.

For example, in 1969 plumbers in Vancouver rejected a 40-per-cent increase in one year but Edmonton sheet metal workers accepted a 51-per-cent raise over three years.

Hamilton carpenters were seeking an increase of 108 per cent over two years while electricians in that city went after a 74-per-cent raise over 24 months.

Another source of inflationary pressures has come from the United States, he said. There are "scattered signs" that the American economy is responding to tight fiscal and monetary policies, but it will be some time before any slow-up effects are felt in Canada.

POLICY DIDN'T WORK

Mr. Sheard said he thought Canada's monetary policy in recent years did more to contribute to inflation than to counteract it.

After the first indications of inflation appeared in 1965, credit conditions were tightened and interest rates rose. But, as economic activity moderated, authorities relaxed their hold on credit in the summer of 1968.

Banks embarked on ambitious promotions of consumer loans — "red convertible loans" — although the easy monetary conditions did not last long enough to fulfil advertising commitments. Traditionally conservative banks were sharply and publicly reprimanded for encouraging people to rush into debt for frivolous expenses.

However, even high interest rates cause little recession in the demand for loans. Mr. Sheard said he attributed this to an "inflationary psychology" — a public conviction that prices and costs will continue to rise at current rates.

U.S. Unemployment Bound to Increase

WASHINGTON (WP) — More Americans will be unemployed as the administration pursues its inflation-restraining policies, Treasure Secretary David Kennedy said Tuesday.

Kennedy called the September 4 per cent jobless rate "Acceptable," but refused to name a maxi-level that would be tolerated.

The September unemployment figure jumped sharply from 3.5 per cent the preceding month to the highest rate in nearly two years.

The Bank of Montreal Monday opened an office in Hong Kong — its second in the Far East — to promote business development interests in the area.

Peter R. Shaddick, executive vice-president of international banking, said at the opening of the new office:

"Hong Kong is Canada's second largest trading partner in Southeast Asia while the Pacific rim as a whole is becoming increasingly important to Canada's economy."

Financial Collection

Financial Collection Agencies Ltd., in preliminary figures, reports a 23-per-cent increase in new profit for the year ended June 30, 1969. Net profit was $516,654 compared with $420,238 for the same period last year.

Earnings per share are 29 cents compared with 23 cents last year, adjusted to reflect a three-for-one split.

Gross revenue increased 19 per cent to $5.36 million from $4.5 million in 1968. New business accepted for collection amounted to $62 million compared with the prior year's $50 million.

Canadian Vickers Ltd.

Canadian Vickers Ltd. Tuesday reported earnings for the nine months ended Aug. 31 of $634,066 or $1.16 a share, up from $453,266 or 83 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Sales volume was $28.4 million compared with $34.74 million last year.

Dynamic Group

A new firm, Dynamic Mining Exploration Ltd., which was incorporated in June under the laws of Quebec, will join the Calgary-based Dynamic Group holding petroleum and uranium properties in the west.

R. C. Brown, a director and officer of the group, said a new stock issue is being underwritten by J. T. Gendron Inc. President of the new firm is Gerald Noel de Tilly, and its officers are Brown, Frank Brown and A. P. Newall Jr., who are also officers of the Dynamic Group.

Montreal Star

David M. Ferguson has been appointed president of Infocor Ltd., established by owners of the Montreal Star in 1968 to plan and develop activities of the newspaper and associated enterprises.

Ferguson, 36-year-old former partner in a management consultant firm, succeeds Derek A. Price, now president and chief executive officer of the Star.

While president in Infocor, Price had been the Star's chairman and chief executive officer. R. Lorne Brown, who was appointed president of the Star May 16, 1967, now becomes chairman.

Associated companies involved are the Montreal Standard Publishing Co. Ltd. and Canada Wide Feature Service Ltd.

Kootenay Base

Kottenay Base Metals (Consolidated) Ltd. has applied for listing on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

There are 3.35 million shares of Kootenay Base Metals stock outstanding. Recently, Kootenay announced plans to supplement its mining and exploration operations with investment, real estate and hotel activities in Canada and Alaska.

FIRM'S FUTURE IN BUBBLES

Hydropneumatics Uses Varied

Seven young directors of a year-old Victoria-based company are basing their future on bubbles.

Columbia Dynamics Ltd., still a private firm but with hopes of turning public when it can demonstrate earning capacity, is a conceptual company with a product having world-wide potential in a pollution-conscious society.

Its concept is the application of hydropneumatics — air bubbles released under water—to produce bubble curtains for a variety of marine applications, among them to dredge silt, to contain oil slicks, channel effluent, and most amazing, to act as breakwaters.

So far, the company has spent some $70,000 of private capital in research and development of its product, on which there are 10 patents pending in North America. Similar installations have been in use for years in Holland, the U.K. and Russia.

LOCAL MEN

All are Victoria residents except Fishman and Jamieson. Lawson has a marketing degree, White is a commerce graduate, Napier is an economist and Jamieson is an accountant.

Five full-time employees include manager Napier, White, Lawson and du Gardein, whose efforts have included consultation on early development of the air curtain principle in Britain and Europe. The famous Delft Hydraulics Laboratory in Holland and Britain's Military Engineering Experimental Establishment were contributors.

Briefly, the concept entails placing a perforated pipe on the sea bed, or in a lake, or suspending it at some distance below the surface by means of chains and floats, said Lawson.

BREAKWATER

A hose connection to shore permits air to be forced by compressor or drum blower into the perforated section, from which bubbles rise in a screen, swelling larger as they rise to surface, he explained.

Such curtains can effectively keep fresh water and salt water separated. By increasing the velocity of air to produce a surge at surface, the effect is to act as a breakwater.

The group has been testing a prototype encompassing its own refinements for several weeks. It is located off Queenswood Drive property belonging to one of the directors.

Lawson said the work has shown that a 12-foot wave may be broken harmlessly — "Devastated," he said.

INEXPENSIVE

A 1,000-foot rock fill breakeater costs in the order of $500,000, Lawson said. An equivalent installation using forced air bubbles might cost about $2 an hour to operate, and would only be used when seas were high. Installation cost would be about one-tenth that of a rock fill, one-fifth of wood piles.

OIL INDUSTRY

But as far as directors are concerned at present, the greatest potential for their concept lies in the oil industry, particularly the offshore drilling area.

A screen of bubbles around a drilling rig or producing offshore well would ensure that any oil leaks were trapped, preventing beach pollution and enabling the spill to be recovered.

"Everyone we have talked to in the oil business and marina business has been very excited about it," said Lawson.

Brokerage Staffs Safe

TORONTO (CP) — A slump in stock market trading in the second half of this year has had little effect on brokerage house employees' jobs, brokers said Monday.

Six members of the Toronto Stock Exchange said in interviews the large decline experienced in July and August did not result in widespread layoffs and that small-scale staff reductions had been due to normal vacancies being left open.

Value of trading for the first six months of this year averaged $453 million a month but declined to an average monthly value of $280 million in July and August.

Dollar-and-share activity picked up in September and October after the summer slump and the prospect of huge brokerage house employee layoffs was described as "very remote."

Imperial Favorable To Report

VANCOUVER — Imperial Oil Ltd. says it is prepared to enter into a new agreement with striking oil workers, based on recommendations of the B.C. Mediation Commission.

Gulf Canada has also indicated it is willing to resume negotiations based on the commission's findings, although it criticized part of the report for saying increases could be granted without increasing prices.

Imperial refinery manager H. L. Cavanaugh said it was gratifying that the commission recognized the industry record in holding refinery prices steady despite rising wage and other costs, when prices generally have climbed sharply in the last 12 years.

But he said it may not be possible to maintain this record in the light of the recommendation.

He pointed out that commissioners had found hourly paid employees in the oil industry in Canada already received "about the highest average wages in the Canadian manufacturing industry." He also expressed surprise at the recommendation for further liberilization of vacation policy in an industry which is among the most advanced in the country in this respect.

Bay Street Investors Primarily Individuals

TORONTO (CP)—While some argue that market trends on the Toronto Stock Exchange follow New York, the Toronto market differs from its American counterpart in at least one important feature.

The Toronto exchange continues to be a market for individual investors while New York appears to be coming more and more under the control of institutions.

A 1968 study by the Toronto Stock Exchange showed that institutions — banks, trust companies, mutual funds, pension funds, investment funds and clubs and insurance companies — made up 26 per cent of the dollar value of all transactions.

These figures have not changed in any great degree since, the exchange says.

20 PER CENT HERE

In 1965, the value of institutional transactions on the Toronto exchange was about 20 per cent while on the New York exchange it was about 31 per cent.

Therefore, in about four years, the value of institutional orders on the Toronto exchange increased by about six per cent, but on the New York exchange it nearly doubled.

The obvious reason for the difference in the influence of institutions on stock markets is the difference in population between Canada and the United States.

The strength of institutions has some implications on the New York exchange that are missing in Toronto.

THINK THE SAME

In the U.S. intentional manipulation of the stock market by groups has been made illegal. But a similar line of thought by two or three institutions could be enough to affect the market's direction.

"Window dressing" is one method by which institutions unintentionally change the market's direction.

The term is applied to portfolio switches by institutions before the end of their quarterly reporting period. The basic strategy of this is to show winners, or stocks that have performed well of late, while keeping the losers to a respectable minimum.

When institutions decide market conditions are poor, they tend to liquidate as much of their holdings as possible and so can touch off a market slump or add to one.

"Moving large blocks of stock is often important to us—we find McLeod do an excellent job in that area."

Canadian Tax Reform Plan Delayed Until Mid-November

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's proposals for sweeping tax reform now are unlikely to be made public much before mid-November, government sources say.

Finance Minister Benson's hoped-for deadline of Oct. 31 cannot be met unless the cabinet and the finance department put their final approval on a proposed white paper this week. It will take four weeks to have the translation completed and the paper printed for distribution.

One source indicated that finial cabinet approval this week is unlikely.

Mr. Benson and his financial aides have been working steadily on the white paper for most of the past two months. Chapters of the report have been revised repeatedly.

An informant said this is not the result of changing opinions in the finance department and cabinet. The problem is that tax reform is such a complicated subject.

LIKE A PUZZLE

It is like a badly-fitting jigsaw puzzle. Push one part of it slightly, and a dozen other pieces are thrown out of alignment.

The over-all scheme is expected to be a modified version of the tax reform recommendations made three years ago by a royal commission headed by the late Kenneth Carter, Toronto accountant and tax consultant.

The Carter proposals called for treating all forms of income —including capital gains—as taxable income, and integrating corporation and personal income taxes through a complicated system of offsetting one against the other.

Carter commission recommendations affecting estate and inheritance taxes, and the taxation of insurance companies, have already been implemented, if only in modified form.

As to the general field of personal and corporation income taxes, sources now indicate that the government's proposals will virtually be "all new, all different." Actual proposals are being guarded with the same secrecy as that which surrounds the preparation of a taxing budget.

COMMITTEE MUST OK

Once tabled in Parliament, the white paper is to be studied in detail by the Commons committee on trade, finance and economic affairs. This study is unlikely to start now before early 1970.

A month to six weeks will be required for major national organizations, such as the Chamber of Commerce, Canadian Tax Foundation, and others, to study the white paper before preparing briefs for the Commons committee.

If the white paper is not issued before mid-November, there will be no time for this study before Parliament's Christmas-New Year recess.

That, in turn, pushes back the date on which any tax reform is likely to become effective.

While the government originally hoped to have the new laws in effect for the tax year starting next Jan. 1, it now seems unlikely that legislation can be pushed through Parliament much before July 1, 1970.

Some officials are thinking of Jan. 1, 1971, as a more suitable date for tax reform to take effect.

Cost-Sharing Fees Queried

The Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee Tuesday called for $400 consultants' study of charges paid to the city of Victoria by other municipalities for services administered by the city.

The committee asked for a study of fees for the operation of the Greater Victoria Public Library, prosecutor's office, magistrate's court, family and children's court; and jail and juvenile detention home.

Area municipalities will be asked to share in the cost of the study.

Palestine Liberation Body Thrives With New Heads

Dave McIntosh, of the Ottawa staff of The Canadian Press, has been on a tour of Middle East countries.

By DAVE McINTOSH

CAIRO (CP) — In the Gaza Strip in 1967, nearly all the self-styled fighters of the Palestine Liberation Organization chucked away their arms and fled before the Israelis hove into view during the six-day war.

The Arab refugees in Gaza, Jordan and other places who thought the liberation army had been going to show them the way back to their lost lands in Israel felt they had been cruelly betrayed.

One would have thought that the Palestine liberation movement would have never recovered from such a blow.

But it is thriving now under new leaders and actually is beginning to get its point across. Under various names and banners, it is recruiting "freedom fighters" who are willing to try to penetrate Israel—although their chances of getting in and out alive are slim.

There are some 2,000,000 Palestinians today. These are the people or their descendants who fled or were forced to flee from what now is Israel when the Jewish state was created in 1948. Half of the Palestinians are refugees living in shack camps around the Middle East, some in Israel-occupied territory. About two-thirds of Jordan's entire population are refugees.

Among the ill-housed, ill-fed, poorly educated refugees stews and bubbles the desire for revenge against Israel.

The liberation movement boasts that children as young as seven are being trained to shoot to kill. "Lion cubs," they are called.

The old and disgraced Palestine Liberation Organization is still in being.

In a once-beautiful house in Cairo I found its headquarters, where in dingy rooms fat men sat around hatching serpentine and unworkable plots against Israel.

Of 10 or 15 men in the building on a good residential street, none was prepared to talk. The leader, they said, would be in the next morning at nine. But in two days running, he didn't show.

DIFFERENT STORY

The oddest thing about the headquarters was the presence of a man who spoke in a heavy Russian accent.

In an office building in downtown Cairo, it was an entirely different story.

Here was the headquarters of Al Fatah, one of the several guerrilla organizations. There seemed to be a genuine and dedicated bustle about the place.

One of the guerrillas present was Abu Souhil, 24, who spoke excellent English and said he was a political science graduate of Cairo University.

He said he was three years old when his parents were killed by the Israelis in 1948. His father had had an orange, fig and date farm.

Souhil was brought up in the Gaza refugee camps with his brothers and sisters.

There is no love lost between the Palestinians and Egyptians.

"Three times the Arab armies have been beaten by Israel," Souhil said. "Each time the beating got worse.

"We Palestinians now see that we have to do the job ourselves. We can't rely on the Arab governments or their armies.

"We are prepared to take 100 years if need be. I won't see the liberation of our occupied lands but perhaps my children or my grandchildren will."

Souhil said Al Fatah doesn't believe in plane hijackings and bomb-throwing at Jewish businesses in other countries.

He said his group wants to fight Israeli soldiers only and claimed it has secret camps inside Israel.

As the victorious Algerian rebels once did, the Palestinian commandos are terrorizing any Arabs in Israeli-occupied territory who collaborate with the Israeli authorities.

Souhil maintained there are tens of thousands of commandos operating now against Israel.

In a commando camp in Lebanon I talked with a 15-year-old boy who was patting his sub-machine-gun with satisfaction.

"Do you know how to use that?" I asked.

"Of course," he said. "And so do all those boys."

He pointed to a group of youngsters, some of whom were no more than eight or nine years old.

"Are you going on a raid into Israel," I asked the 15-year-old.

"I have asked and asked and hope to go soon," he said.

"Why?"

"Because the Zionists have taken our land."

Al Fatah's motto is "Revolution until victory."

Mohamed Fayek, Egypt's minister of national guidance, lectured the foreign reporters recently about biased stories.

But he declined to see a Canadian reporter who tried for five days to see him.

Egyptians have never been a people to emigrate. They have lived on the Nile for 5,000 years and other people long came to them for culture.

But this is changing. The educated middle class is beginning to leave. It has no voice in politics and clearly does not believe the government's exaggerated claims about the confrontation with Israel.

About 2,000 Egyptians are leaving for Canada each year, most of them businessmen. They have one built-in advantage. Nearly every educated Egyptian speaks French and English as well as Arabic.

Victoria Fair Seeks Grant For 1970

University of Victoria officials Tuesday asked area municipalities to contribute $14,000 to the 1970 version of the highly successful Victoria Fair.

The request got the immediate endorsement of mayors Hugh Stephen of Victoria and Hugh Curtis of Saanich at a Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee meeting.

However the 1970 councils of each municipality will be the bodies to decide whether the grant will be paid.

PARTNERSHIP SEEN

Dean Peter Garvie of Uvic's faculty of fine arts said the grant was needed to offset the cost of renting the McPherson Playhouse for the two-month festival.

"It could be an imaginative partnership between the university and the city that would attract nation-wide publicity," said Uvic theatre director Ralph Allen.

He said the result could be a major festival.

The 1969 Victoria Fair, a festival of plays and music, played to 23,000 people and grossed $30,000.

"I think the grant is a good bargain and we should consider it," said Stephen.

He disagreed with Curtis' emphasis on attracting more tourists with the festival. "Our prime concern is for the cultural enrichment of the people living here."

Planning Proposal Presented

North and Central Saanich municipal councils heard but haven't yet endorsed, a proposal from Victoria Ald. Ian Stewart to bring regional planning under direct control of the Capital Region District Board.

Central Saanich will hold a special meeting to discuss the proposal outlined Monday by Stewart, Capital Region Planning Board chairman. North Saanich has tabled the proposal to another meeting.

Mr. Stewart told the two councils if they didn't accept the proposals they would find planning transferred anyway, under provincial government conditions.

"There is no threat from the provincial government," he said.

"But we have the opportunity to determine for ourselves the terms and conditions of the transfer."

Stewart, accompanied by regional planning director Tony Roberts will visit all area municipalities to present the proposals which they hope will be endorsed.

Thursday they will make a presentation to Victoria city council.

FREE HOME TRIAL

Use this new Shell Hot Water Heater rent-free for 3 months. You'll get all the hot water you want.

This 32-gallon heater gives virtually endless hot water. Try it—rent-free!

Does your old hot water heater run cold? Take advantage of this special offer from Shell Home Comfort. Here's all you do:

1 Call us now, and ask about the Trial Offer on a 32-gallon Shell Hot Water Heater. You'll find the phone number below.

2 We'll connect your new heater* and you can use it rent-free for 3 months. All we ask is that you use Shell Heating Oil. All you pay is the small oil bill.

3 If, after 3 months, you aren't completely satisfied with your Shell Hot Water Heater, we'll disconnect it and cancel the contract. You won't be charged a penny for rentals or disconnecting the heater.

But we feel sure once you have used it for 3 months, you'll want to keep it. The new Shell Hot Water Heater gives virtually endless hot water. At a surprisingly low cost. (NOTE: You may even save money. Ask. We'll compare the cost of using our hot water heater with gas and hydro heaters.)

You can lease the Shell Hot Water Heater at a low monthly rate. We include charges on your oil bill, so there's just one cheque to write. There's no deposit. And those first 3 months are rent free.

Four interesting facts

1. This is a high-speed heater. You'll get water three to seven times faster than if you used gas or hydro heaters.

EXAMPLE: You could run five piping-hot baths in a single hour. Do four big loads of laundry without running out of hot water.

2. Smaller than conventional heaters. Takes under one day to install to existing oil lines. Rust-proof, fully insulated, glass-lined water tank.

3. Unique patented Turboflue† design—exclusive to Shell. A special spiral baffle draws more of the available heat from the flame. This gives faster warm-up and saves heating oil.

4. Should you decide to purchase the Hot Water Heater, you can spread payments over 10 years. But remember, you are under no obligation to lease or buy when you try this heater for 3 months. All we ask is that you use Shell Heating Oil. All you pay is the small monthly oil bill.

Japan Trade Concessions Sought

By SELIG S. HARRISON

TOKYO (WP) — The United States is now openly linking demands for Japanese trade and investment concessions with the forthcoming Washington negotiations bewteen President Nixon and Prime Minister Eisaku Sato over the return of Okinawa.

Assistant Secretary of State Philip Trezise told a Japan-US. trade conference currently under way there that "Sweeping" Japanese moves to relax import restriction would "clear the atmosphere in Washington and would benefit the prime minister's visit."

Informed American sources indicated that the U.S. deleview, the Japanese argue, the gation has carefully avoided going beyond this "passing reference" and has not made a direct threat that the return of Okinawa would be conditioned upon specified concessions within a fixed timetable.

INDIRECT WARNING

But Trezise reportedly declared on two occasions that the U.S would no longer "see much point" in continuing further trade talks "at the present level" if the present round failed.

This has been interpreted as an indirect warning that Nixon is preparing to bring up economic disputes between the two countries in talks with Sato tentatively scheduled to begin Nov. 19.

"It had not been anticipated that the U.S. side would try to connect the import decontrol issue with the Okinawa problem so openly," observed the pro-government, pro-U.S. Japan Times in a front-page commentary Tuesday.

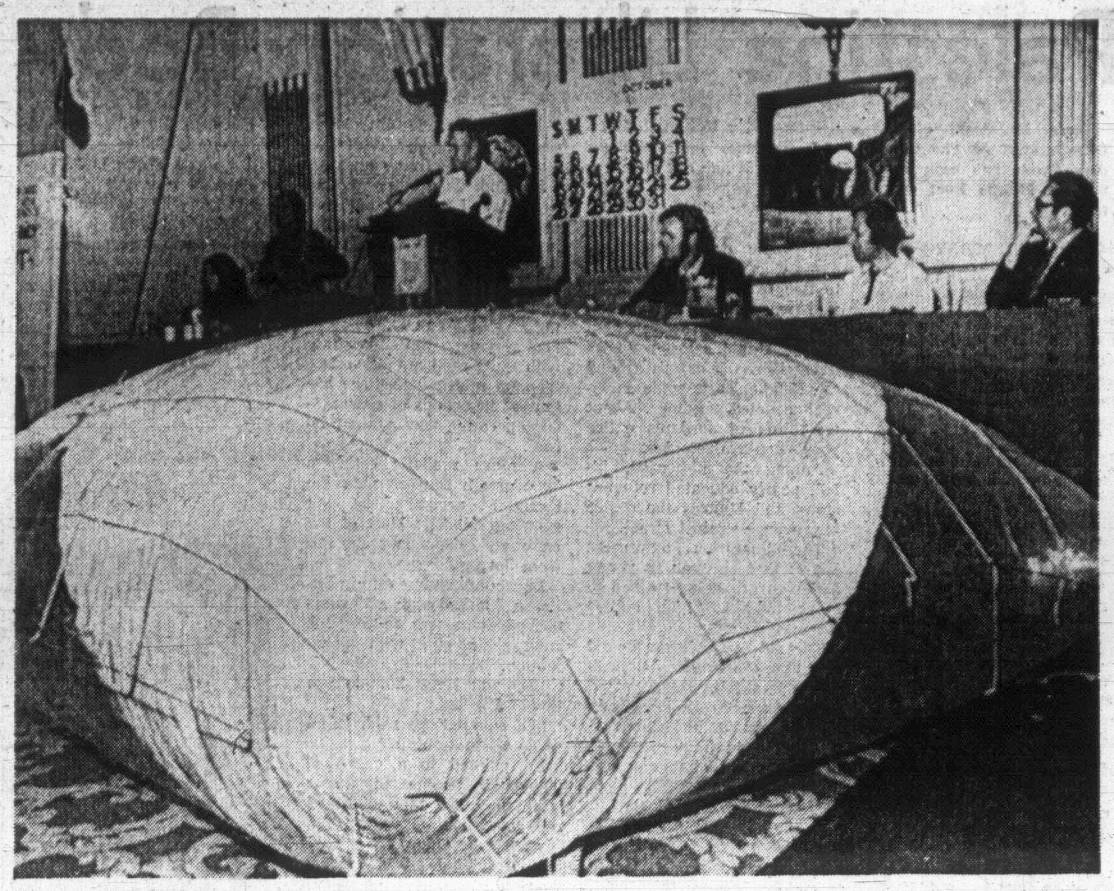

The Japanese reaction to the introduction of the Okinawa issue is in the spirit of injured innocence, and officials are saying that the U.S. has resorted to below-the-belt tactics unbecoming to a friend.

From the American point of major result will be to undo much of the political goodwill that might have otherwise resulted from returning the island.

Aides to Prime Minister Sato contend that the premier would be in a difficult political position domestically if he appears prepared to trade Japasese economic interests for Okinawa.

Partly to guard against this, informed sources suggest, Sato has tried to get the public on his side from the outset by "exposing" the American tactics.

Elections for the National Diet or Parliament are widely expected to be held next January.

Nigerian Civil War Shifting From Front Line to Oil Field

By JIM HOAGLAND

PORT HARCOURT, Nigeria (WP) — The heat of Nigeria's civil war has shifted from the front lines to the oil fields. Biafran air raids and ground attacks by infiltrators are hampering Nigeria's efforts to resume full-scale oil production.

The fear generated by the attacks hangs heavily over this war-ravaged eastern part of the Niger River delta. It is also reported to pervade Nigeria's other major on-shore oil-producing region, the mid-western state.

Fear, in fact, is cutting into oil production more than the actual physical damage of the attacks. "The oil companies are convinced that every Biafran rocket has their name written on it, and are moving very gingerly," Explains one foreigner familiar with the situation.

Production figures, which had risen sharply this spring, are dropping monthly. At least one major field, along the Imo River, is closed because of Biafran incursions into families of oil workers have been pulled out of the camps around the fields here and in the mid-west. Nigerian troops guard the fields.

Damage Minimal

Small Swedish-made Biafran planes have rocketed Shell-BP (British Petroleum) installations in the mid-west at least four times since May. Shell-BP, a joint venture of two international petroleum giants, produces most of Nigeria's oil.

An expert who was at Ughelli Field after an attack described damage as minimal, with one tank having been dented, and another slightly cracked. "The rockets must not have been armed," he said. "It looked like they had been dropping firecrackers."

The raids on the Shell-BP installations have caused no casualties. In an attack on a Gulf installation last month, a worker was killed.

The ground attacks are viewed more seriously, but descriptions of them are difficult to obtain.

An unimpeachable source said that three men dressed as civilians and carrying grenades were shot to death by Nigerian soldiers in the last two weeks in the Port Harcourt oil area. They carried documents identifying them as members of BOFF—Biafran Organization of Freedom Fighters.

Mainstay of Economy

It is still not clear if the Biafran slaying of 11 Italian oilmen in May was part of the organized attack on the oil companies, or an ad hoc shooting spree. The attack did come at about the same time Biafran leader Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu vowed to cripple oil, the "mainstay of Nigeria's economy."

Oil is only one of the factors in this complex war. But it is an important one. The foreign exchange it earns is vital to Nigeria for buying weapons. And the country is heavily banking on an oil boom to carry it through reconstruction at the war's end.

Biafra claims that its territory includes the oil areas around Port Harcourt—which accounted for more than half of Nigeria's total production before the war—and that Nigeria is "pirating" the oil. Oilmen here estimate that known fields in the territory currently held by the Biafrans would produce no more than 150,000 barrels a day.

In 1967, before the war, oil production in Nigeria was around 55,500 barrels a day. After Biafra seceded and took this area, and the federal government blockaded the coast, no oil went out until the end of last year when Nigerian troops pushed the Biafrans out of the delta.

By spring, Gulf and Shell-BP had pushed their production back to the pre-war level, and experts thought Nigeria might top the magic one-barrel-a-day mark by the end of the year.

That hope was now dissolved. The figures for Shell-BP barrels-a-day production, which has been most heavily hit by the Biafran raids, tells the story:

May, 373,000; June, 350,000; July, 309,000, and August, between 270,000 and 280,000—a drop of 100,000 barrels a day since May.

The Nigerian government considers these figures classified, and will not release them. Officials decline to confirm or deny those listed above, which were obtained from a highly reliable source.

Local officials are also worried about recurring reports that the oil companies plan to retrench investment in this strategically and politically volatile area. The oil companies are quick to deny this, but do admit that they will concentrate their investments in the mid-west and in off-shore projects as long as the war continues.

This has not completely reassured officials in Port Harcourt, who also fear that, as one of them put it, "businessmen in Lagos will use our problems here as an argument to return eastern Nigeria to the bush."

Plans to build a new refinery on Lagos Island, the nation's capital, are an irritant to these officials, who think it makes more economic sense to locate the refinery in this area.

. . . logical progress

Still in her early 20s, Leslie has made the climb step by logical step. She was six when she appeared in an episode of the all-but-forgotten TV series, Beulah. She was 14 when she won $12,500 in a TV contest show which disappeared at the time of the quiz show scandals. She was in her teens when Mitch Miller presented her on his Sing Along series.

Now Leslie Uggams has made television's big time: star of her own show, which had its premiere Sept. 28.

SHOW WAS A FLUKE

"My husband and I had just moved into a New York apartment when I finished singing at the Copacabana last March," she says. "It was on Central Park West, with a view, and it seemed sensible because Grahame (Grahame Pratt, her husband of the last four years) was a stockbroker working on Wall Street.

"We'd been talking about making a situation comedy pilot for NBC, and I went to Puerto Rico for a club date. When I got back we were talking to CBS about a pilot for a situation comedy: the idea was to hire three writers to come up with a format and to pick the best and shoot it."

At that point, The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour was cancelled and CBS, in a programming bind, approached Leslie with the idea of an hour variety show. It was to be produced by Saul Ilson and Ernie Chambers, Smothers' alumni with whom Leslie had worked earlier.

It was late in the selling season when The Leslie Uggams Show was announced by the network. And the show is in one of the schedule's toughest hours, opposite NBC's Bonanza.

But Leslie seems as serene about her television future as a winning politician after election day.

"Well, I've been singing ever since I can remember and I had the Broadway show, Hallelujah, Baby, so I've had experience working in sketches." she said. "I studied acting besides."

ALL AGES SHOWN

"I think the most interesting part of the series, for me, anyway, will be the weekly sketch, The Folks on Sugar Hill. That's where I grew up, on Sugar Hill in Washington Heights in New York.

"It's going to be a sort of black adaptation of The Honeymooners or The Goldbergs, and Lillian Hayman, who was in the Broadway show with me, will play my mother. I'll have a hippie sister. If the show has any racial significance, it will be that the sketch has a representative of each member of the present black generation."

Leslie grew up in show business. Her father sang in the famous Hall Johnson Choir, and her mother was in the chorus line of the Cotton Club. Leslie showed early musical talent and had her education at the Professional Chidren's School in New York and the Juilliard School of Music.

Both parents, however, quit show business after Leslie was born.

Leslie, in spite of the heady experience of playing the top clubs of the world, is happy to settle down to what she hopes will be a steady job.

"You get sort of lonely on the road," she reflected. "You read a lot and play a lot of scrabble and gin rummy, but it's still lonely."

As is customary, she owns a piece of her own show through her production company. The company is called Smaggu Productions. Secret meaning?

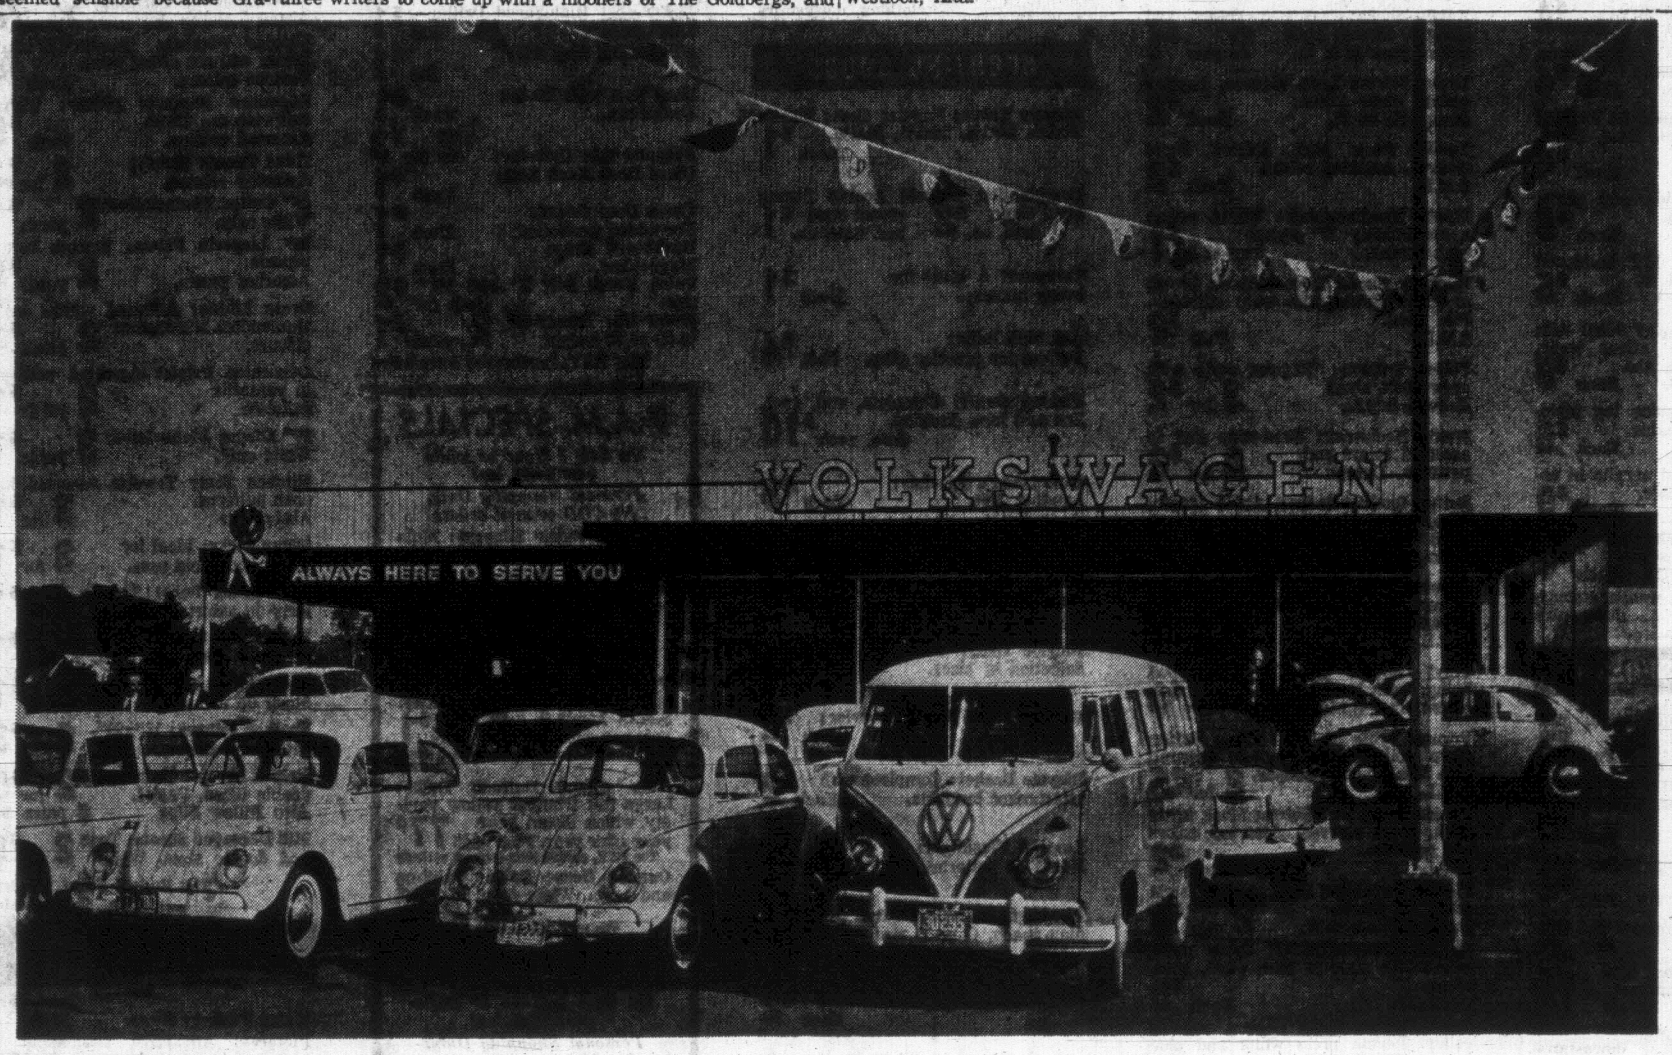

"No, silly," she said. "That's Uggams spelled backwards."

Rustlers Nabbed

EDMONTON (CP) — Three men captured in a citizen's arrest have pleaded guilty to cattle theft. Selwynn Bissoon, 24, and Harvey Phillips, 26, both of Edmonton, and William Homenuik, 28, of Vegreville, Alta., were remanded to Nov. 17 for sentencing. The three were held by Mr. and Mrs. Kare Schreiber Saturday, trapping them on a dead-end road 25 miles north of Westlock, Alta.

AND EXPORT CIGARETTE PAPERS

Volkswagen is giving us the business.

And we're taking it.

As of right now we're in the Volkswagen business.

And starting right now, we'll be putting our experience to work selling and servicing 1970 Bugs, Buses, Fastbacks, Notchbacks, Squarebacks and Karmann Ghias.

When we're not doing that, we'll be showing people around our lot full of completely reconditioned VWs. As well as making sure that anybody who needs part of a Volkswagen gets the part of a Volkswagen he needs.

Another part of the business that we're getting, is a service department full of the latest, specialized VW service equipment, including a complete diagnostic centre. Along with a staff of factory-trained VW mechanics who know all there is to know about what makes a Volkswagen go. (And how to get it going if it isn't.)

So, if you have a Volkswagen that needs a little attention, or some intention of getting a little Volkswagen, why not drop in? And give us the business.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1969 —PAGE 17

WARING PLACE WAS ON WATCH this morning when a descendant of Caddy, the sea serpent, who was first seen at Cadboro Bay, returned to the scene of its parent's first frolickings. Diving, swimming and playing around a small sailboat moored offshore, the creature kept residents glued to their binoculars for more than an hour before it headed out to sea. The first to spot the creature was Mrs. W. S. Foster (right), followed by Mrs. Frank Waring. When Times photographer Bill Halkett appeared on the scene the creature had moved out too far to take a positive identifying picture.

Jubilee Concerned, Eyes Idle Laundry

By JIM HUME

Royal Jubilee Hospital's laundry plant can hang on for another year, maybe two, if the baling wire and the maintenance crews hold out.

But, says administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles, the creaking plant is strictly a "week-to-week operation" with maximum effort required to keep it going at required capacity.

And it won't have any of its own linen to wash until, at the earliest, the summer of 1971.

Provincial government officials in the department of mental health say they can't see the Glendale laundry going into operation until the hospital is completed and the 300-bed institution in full use.

Officials in the department of public works say the laundry is almost fully equipped and could be in operation by year-end.

If the confusion and crossed signals surprises the layman, it doesn't surprise the Regional Hospital Districts special committee, struck several months ago, charged with the task of find a site, costs and the efficiency of a central laundry operation to serve all hospitals in the area.

After months of research and inquiries ranging from Pittsburgh to Los Angeles, the committee, three weeks ago, was ready to report its findings.

Committee members were consternated when they were asked why they were looking for a new central laundry plant when a laundry capable of handling linen and supplies for 1,000 beds was approaching completion at Glendale.

FIRST KNOWLEDGE

Committee members claim the suggestion was the first knowledge they had of the new facility although a representative of the provincial government sits on the committee.

They now hope to have their report in the hands of the Regional Hospital District's advisory committee on hospital problems next Wednesday.

It will suggest that plans for one central laundry be scrapped and that Glendale, and the relatively new plant at St. Joseph's Hospital, handle the washing for all area hospitals.

That suggestion will not end, but could well add to, the confusion surrounding Glendale since Public Works Minister W. N. Chant turned the first sod five days before the 1966 provincial election.

At the time he said Glendale should be completed within a year "or maybe a little longer."

Glendale was started as a "school for retarded children."

It was still a "school" in December, 1967, when the Times published a photograph of the new laundry and boiler plant under construction.

They would like to use the new laundry facility which, with St. Joseph's laundry, could end washing and ironing problems for some years. But they don't want to be saddled with the responsibility of a hospital obviously designed to serve the entire province. And they fear that if they get their feet in the laundry door they might finish up with the entire hospital.

Dr. Gordon Tucker, deputy minister of mental health, says there is no danger of that happening.

"Glendale is too much of a province-wide facility for that to happen," he said.

At the same time he admits that once completed a public society will be formed to run the hospital — an indication that already the provincial government is eyeying the possibility of unloading Glendale on the Regional District.

The government has already set a precedent in the field.

The Eric Martin Institute was built as a provincial facility.

It finished up under the administrative jurisdiction of Jubilee and the over all jurisdiction of the Regional Hospital District. The switch cost local taxpayers $60,000 for operating capital and makes them responsible for capital costs should expansion be required or new equipment be needed.

Quick Care Unit Approved

St. Joseph's General Hospital has received provincial government approval to proceed with plans for a on-storey ambulatory care unit costing an estimated $287,000.

The proposed unit, for day care surgery and other ambulatory programs, is expected to reduce the number of admissions to active treatment beds, thereby increasing the number of beds available to acutely ill patients, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said.

The building, to be of concrete block construction and containing an estimated $85,000 worth of equipment, will be built adjacent to the existing emergency department.

Approval is subject to concurrence of the Capital Region Hospital District.

Donald Cox, deputy minister of hospital insurance, said the ambulatory care unit would contain space for 18 recovery beds, two operating rooms, two treatment rooms and five treatment cubicles.

Also approved Tuesday were renovations to St. Joseph's totalling $9,746.

First Patients Set for Dec. 1

But, warned administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles, that does not mean the hospital will be swinging into full operation on that date.

It will be the initial operation of transferring patients from the Bay Pavilion to the new facility," he said. "It can only be regarded as phase one of bringing the EMI into operation."

The Bay Pavilion can handle 50 patients.

With the transfer of patients, staff and equipment the Pavilion will be freed to provide 50 more acute care beds for the main hospital.

The Institute, completed in February, will eventually provide services for 170 mentally ill patients.

But he did state that he anticipated no major problems in filling staff requirements.

"To date we have 900 applications for positions in the Institute," he said. "That would indicate that there is no shortage of people to fill the many positions available."

PELLET GUNS NEED LICENCE

Strict regulations governing the use of pellet guns are now in effect throughout British Columbia.

Police warned today that pellet guns, like revolvers, are classified as restricted weapons under a new section of the Criminal Code which came into effect Oct. 1.

This means an owner must obtain a permit to use or possess a pellet gun outside his own home or business premises.

If he fails to do this, he is liable to two years' imprisonment.

The growing use of pellet guns, especially by juveniles, is causing concern to law enforcement officers.

Premier to Open Colombo Meet

Premier Bennett will officially open the annual Colombo Plan conference in Victoria Oct. 20, it was announced today.

John Hadwen, secretary-general of the conference, said Bennett accepted an invitation from Prime Minister Trudeau to open the talks.

Working sessions of the conference start Oct. 14 and end Oct. 17. Bennett will open the week of talks between senior civil servants of the 24 nations, which will provide ground work for the ministerial meetings the following and final week.

Bennett was invited to open the meetings as head of the government at the first provincial capital to hold the conference.

Hadwen, who is Canada's high commissioner to Malaysia and Singapore and ambassador to Burma said, "to hold the meeting in Victoria emphasizes Canada's and British Columbia's increasing connections with the Pacific and Asian countries and underlines the importance of co-operation between all levels of government in carrying out Canada's foreign aid program."

Trudeau asked Bennett to do the honors in a personal telegram. Bennett replied he would be "glad to address the conference."

Rules 'Force' Hovercraft To End Run

Regular daily service to Nanaimo has been suspended by Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. of Vancouver because of a "limbo of operating regulations."

President Barry Jones said today expansion of service in southwestern B.C., including proposed Vancouver-Victoria runs, has been delayed until the area of operating regulations is clear.

The company's 20-passenger craft began Nanaimo service in February, intending to serve Victoria as well, but was not able to secure a landing site close in to the urban capital area.

Jones said the craft is meeting its Nanaimo requirements as far as specially reserved trips are concerned, and will do so for two weeks.

After that he hoped the licensing and regulatory problems will be cleared up.

A main problem, he said, has been the licensing of engineers. Other than factory representatives, Canadian regulations do not provide for Hovercraft engineers.

NO RULES

"It took 12 months to get a licence for a pilot," Jones said, hoping that licensed engineers would be provided for in less time.

Operating regulations also are absent, he charged. "It is impossible to apply Canada Steamship or Canadian Air regulations to Hovercraft."

It is difficult to plan the craft's work, too, Jones feels, because licensing for charter purposes is not clearly defined between provincial and federal authorities.

Jones said he hopes the firm will be able to operate as other carriers in the Gulf of Georgia area, but if not, Pacific Hovercraft will look to charter work in the Canadian Arctic, which has already been lined up.

Meanwhile, the craft sits idle for much of the time.

Police Union Changes

Sgt. Lorne Shandley, for 18 years president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, has stepped down.

New president, elected Tuesday night, is Const. Kenneth Horsman, who was recording secretary.

Arthur Mayse...

TODAY, I SUGGEST WE look in on a pair of high-calibre former executives, who are doing their best to help solve a problem which our community shares with others across Canada. Since these men insist on remaining anonymous, I can only introduce them as X and Y. Between them and with help from other volunteers, they operate a hard-trying service called the Housing Registry.

The job they took on for free in December of 1968 is to bring low-income renter and prospective landlord together. This, if you will permit me a massive under-statement, often requires a little doing.

X and Y receive no pay for their labors, although I believe that Greater Victoria Community Council of which the Housing Registry is a sub-committee, keeps their cars in gas.

Like the council itself, they look forward to an era of adequate housing for all, at which time the registry can quietly phase itself out of existence.

But right now, any such prospect is remote, and the task of matching too many applicants with too few rental properties grinds along.

As of Tuesday, the number of applications for rental quarters stood at 766, against 417 properties brought to Housing Registry attention. Known placements totalled 151, a figure that struck me as discouragingly low when I heard it.

D. Garth Homer, community council executive director, is convinced that the actual tally runs a good deal higher. By no means all of those whom the registry team assists without fee take time to report back when placed.

By way of further statistics, 87 applications were on file this morning and phone calls are averaging 24 a day.

Headquarters for this free service is Spencerhouse at 1951 Cook Street. There, registry co-directors X and Y occupy connecting offices which were achieved by cutting a doorway in a partition.

Floor space in each cubby measures seven by nine feet. Each contains a filing cabinet and a desk with phone on top and chair behind it, plus a second chair for callers. Let several house-hunting families arrive at the same time, and standing-room is at a premium.

★

A typical work-day may commence with a visit from a woman who explains that the house she and her husband rent has just been sold. They have a month to find another for themselves and their four children. Their income is limited: is there a place within their means on the housing registry list?

Like his partner, Director X runs his office with the efficiency he once gave to master-minding a responsible post in private industry.

Both men emerged from retirement to pilot this unpaid public service.

X comes up with a house that may fill the bill. It's no kitten, but it offers plenty of room. Rent is $125 a month; why not go out and have a a talk with the owner?

By this time, a young, married Indian from the wider British Columbia is waiting. He is enrolled at the Institute of Adult Education, his wife and children will soon be joining him, and he's having a hard time finding quarters.

(Chief Phillip Paul or Harry Dick, councillors to Indians for the Institute, sent him down to the registry. Good men both, who word hard for their people.)

The next applicant will like as not be an old-age pensioner, alone in the world, and in search of a housekeeping room. It must be warm, mind, and downtown so that he can drop in at the Silver Threads and, once in a while, go to an afternoon movie.

Before the day is much further along, the registry team will be involved singly or together in a case of the sort that turns up all too frequently.

A husband and father has deserted his wife and family. Here's the mother, sick-worried, with such resources as she possesses dwindling fast away. The rent where they are is beyond her means. They need an apartment not too far from schools and shopping centre.

Sometimes the housing registry men manage to turn up adequate shelter, and enjoy a brief moment of satisfaction. Again, their efforts may yield only failure and frustration.

Theirs is a tough job . . . after all, how many housekeeping rooms are available for an elderly woman with arthritis and a heart condition who can't climb stairs? (They found her one, after hard scouting).

But each day brings new problems to them and to the committee that backs and aids them. The chief problem is the one that has haunted them since, in a spirit of do-it-yourself, the venture was launched by the Community Council with municipal-provincial grants, and realtor support.

This is lack of sufficient listings to meet a need that will become acute before winter.

BASEMENTS FLOODED

Rush Hour Caught In Sudden Downpour

A sudden downpour drenched Greater Victoria this morning, flooding roads and basements and making driving hazardous for rush hour traffic.

Within a half hour, between 8:15 and 8:45 a.m., .35 inches of rain fell, the weather office said.

The deluge was preceded by dark clouds which almost turned dawn into night.

"If the downpour had continued for another half hour, it would have caused serious trouble," they said.

The city engineering department received a rash of calls from homeowners, complaining their basements were flooding.

Bill Jorgensen, assistant city engineer, said the flood was mainly caused by clogged drain pipes.

He said "ponding" also took place at many street intersections because drains were blocked with leaves.

City traffic inspector Richard Berry urged motorists to turn on their lights during heavy rainfalls.

Province to Protect Caves From Vandalism

McWILLIAMS
. . . to visit caves

Immediate steps will be taken to prevent vandalism and souvenir hunting in a spectacular cave near Port Alberni, a British Columbia government official said Tuesday.

Members of the Canadian Speleological Society have been keeping the location of the 4,000-foot cave secret pending a guarantee that the province would protect it from damage.

H. G. McWilliams, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said he would meet members of the society and provincial parks officials to work out details

McWilliams and parks director Bob Ahrens will also make a visit to the caves. Ahrens said the only thing standing in the way of creation of a park at the site was the legal status of the land.

The society, meanwhile, said has learned its members were not the first to find the cave, which they had named Casteret Cave, after famed French speleologist Norbert Casteret.

The society credited the discovery to Jim Johnson, a Nanaimo longshoreman. He found it in 1964, sealed off an entrance to protect it and kept its existence a secret.

He named it Euclataws Cave, after a Vancouver Island Indian tribe. The speleological society said it has accepted this name and the government is expected to do likewise

TRIO FACE TRIAL FOR BRAWL

CROFTON — Three Crofton youths charged with causing bodily warm and intent to wound four Greek sailors here Aug. 16 pleaded not guilty in court this week and were released on bail.

They will be tried in Nanaimo assize court in November. No exact date has been set.

Roy Deslaurier, 18, is also charged with possession of an offensive weapon and was released on a $3,000 bail for both charges.

Robert Little and Kenneth Rudsvick, both 20, were released on $2,500 bail each.

Hearing Set In Hunting Fatality

CAMPBELL RIVER — Andrew Howard High, 22, of Nanaimo, charged with manslaughter in the hunting death of his brother, has been released on $2,000 bail.

Roger John High, 23, also of Nanaimo, died from a gunshot wound Sept. 12 when hunting near Campbell River.

Nanaimo Opening For B.C. Bank

NANAIMO (CP) — A branch of the Bank of British Columbia will be officially opened here Thursday bringing the number of its branches in B.C. to eight.

A meeting of bank directors will be held Thursday morning in the office of Mayor Frank Ney, with a report from Nanaimo branch manager Wayne W. Allen.

IWA Chastized On Vote Apathy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the International Woodworkers of America were chastized Tuesday for an apparent lack of concern about their role in politics.

A report by IWA officers to the Western Canadian Region annual convention said John Squire, an officer of the Port Alberni local and New Democratic Party candidate in the Alberni riding, lost in the Aug. 27 provincial election because he did not get the support of trade unionists and their wives.

"If he had, we would have won and the same may be said of other candidates," the report said.

"While it is too early to make any precise analysis of the election throughout the province, we must now realize that there exists in this province a widespread prejudice against trade union political activity and that that prejudice extends into the rank and file of the trade union movement."

The report said that while it appears to be acceptable for business and professional interests to support their chosen parties financially and otherwise, it is generally held that "there is something sinister about trade unionists having a political view and sponsoring it.

"During an election campaign, hardly a day goes by without an editorial that notes with shock that a union leader or rank-and-filer has dared to take a political view and the legal and peaceful steps to advance that view," it said.

LABOR SAID DEAD

Al Hartung of Portland, Ore., former international president of the IWA, said that the union in both Canada and the United States is not "carrying out its responsibility at the ballot box."

Mr. Hartung said that of the 100 members of the U.S. Senate, 55 are multi-millionaires and added that he thinks labor is not only dead, but "has already buried itself."

"Don't neglect political activity," he said. "Get down to it and get some people into the party you want and you think should belong in it."

Earlier, Grace MacInnis, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Vancouver Kingsway, told IWA members that if labor wants to win its own battles, it must look for allies among welfare recipients, old-age pensioners and low income wage earners.

Malaspina Pupils Name Council

The new council has said one of its priorities will be to obatin space for a student lounge at the college.

Quaife Will Seek Another Mandate

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife and two or three aldermen up for re-election in December have indicated they will run again.

Ald. R. H. Benzies, who is in hospital, has not yet announced whether he will run.

But Quaife, 34, who completes his first two-year term, said he expects a couple of opponents for the mayor's seat though there have been no public announcements.

Four-year veteran Ald. Tom Kilpatrick will contest his seat and Ald. Roy Harder will attempt to get support for his second term as alderman.

"It is sort of interesting to run after just one term. It's a good indication of whether the people are happy with what you have done," said Harder.

Quaife won against two opponents two years ago after 12-year veteran Jack Dobson stepped down.

SCHOOL THEFTS NET JAIL TERM

NANAIMO—A 21-month term in Oakalla for theft over $50 was given Tuesday to a former Nanaimo accounts supervisor.

Eward Frederick Bealle, 35, of Nanaimo was found guilty of conversion of more than $25,000 in school funds, the thefts occuring between Oct. 20, 1966, and July 21, 1969.

A police witness told court that Bealle said he was a compulsive gambler, especially on poker and horses. The thefts began when he cashed a $577 petty cash cheque, spent the money, later covering the theft by putting his own money back into the accounts.

Clarke testified that investigation showed the thefts had been almost monthly, some times twice a month.

Bealle said he went to Nanaimo four years ago after conquering a drinking problem. "I tried to be too good too fast."

Judge Eric Winch, before sentencing Bealle said, "We demand and we expect of our public servants—trust. This is a breach of trust."

DUNCAN MAY LOSE TELEGRAPH

DUNCAN — The Canadian Pacific Railway is considering moving telegraph and dispatch services out of Duncan station to Nanaimo, Mayor Jim Quaife said Tuesday.

The move is one step in a CPR plan to eventually close down the old station in the middle of Duncan.

Quaife said passenger service will continue but the downtown station isn't vital to this service. He said arrangements would be made with the CPR to shelter train passengers in another building.

Quaife has been in touch with CPR officails in Vancouver for months but no deadlines for transfer or services has been mentioned, he said.

Smythes, Day Fail in Appeal

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday dismissed an appeal against a 1961 income tax levy imposed on Conn Smythe, his son Stafford and Clarence (Hap) Day.

The three Toronto Maple Leaf hockey club personalities had appealed a federal tax on $728,652 in undistributed income from a company they once jointly owned.

The judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Wilfred Judson said this undistributed income from C. Smythe Ltd. was placed in the hands of the shareholders through an "artificial" series of transactions.

Conn Smythe, who built the Toronto National Hockey League club, his son Stafford, a principal Leaf shareholder, and Mr. Day, a former Leaf coach, were principal shareholders in C. Smythe Ltd.

The elder Smythe owned 52 per cent, the son 30.8, Mr. Day 16 and an A. M. Boyd 1.2.

The revenue department took no tax action against Mr. Boyd in the case, which Mr. Justice Judson described as "a well-considered scheme" adopted on the recommendation of professional advisers.

Mr. Justice Judson said there are appropriate ways of distributing a company's surplus to shareholders but these ways involve payment of income tax.

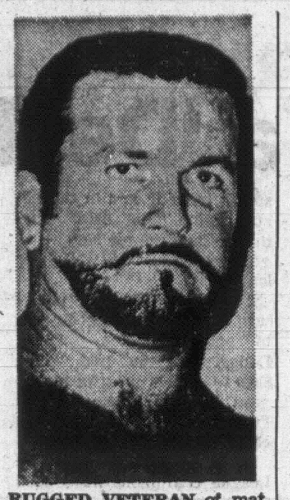

Riders Failed In Attempt To Get Ohler

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders have had no success in a tentative effort to acquire quarterback Pete Ohler, cut from British Columbia Lions earlier this year, coach Frank Clair of the Eastern Football Conference club said Tuesday.

But the Riders are in better shape physically than at first appeared after Saturday's 28-20 victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Clair said.

The coach said he was concerned about losing back-up quarterback Bill Van Burkleo because of a knee injury and had "preliminary talks" with Ohler as a possible temporary replacement.

Clair said it now looks as though Van Burkleo will play in Sunday's game against Saskatchewan Roughriders in Regina but he won't be used for punting.

The B.C. section meet will serve as a qualifying event for the Canadian championships at Edmonton, Jan. 27 to Feb. 1.

Fastest Trotter Lame; Career Appears Ended

The New York connections of the Harness Horse of the Year for 1967 and 1968 were not available for comment today on the report from Montreal that Nevele Pride had pulled up lame after a workout.

Mike MacCormac, director of racing at Blue Bonnets, said Nevele Pride had been withdrawn from a $25,000 trot at the Canadian track scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 19, because of the mishap.

"It came as a complete surprise to us," MacCormac said. "However, under the circumstances we have no alternative but to scratch the horse.

"Stanley Dancer, the trainer-driver, called me and said that the horse pulled up lame and, in the best interests of the horse, it was decided to retire him immediately."

Nevele Pride now will be retired to stud at the Stoner Creek Farm in Paris, Ky. It was also learned that a news conference will be held Thursday in Kentucky, at which time further details will be given about his injury.

It had been expected that Nevele Pride would race this week in Rockingham, Mass., and then follow this race with the Blue Bonnets event before heading to California.

Dancer had hoped he would reach the $1,000,000 mark in earnings. He wanted Nevele Pride to become the first trotter to hit this total in purse earnings.

Fresh Yankee, a Sydney, N.S., horse, was scheduled to provide the main opposition for the champion here. It is expected a decision will be reached later this week on whether or not to cancel the event.

Paduano Gets Shot At Durelle's Title

MONTREAL (CP) — Joey Durelle of Sorel, Que., has signed a contract to defend his Canadian welterweight championship against Donato Paduano of Montreal at the Forum Dec. 9.

Durelle will receive $10,000 for the defence of his title, while Paduano will get 15 per cent of the gate. Capacity of the Forum, home of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, is more than 16,000 for boxing.

LONG STREAK

Paduano, the former Canadian Olympic star, scored his 15th consecutive pro win Monday night in New York's Madison Square Garden by winning a unanimous decision over veteran Pablo Lopes in a 10-round match.

However, Regis Levesque, who will promote the Dec. 9 match here, Tuesday was still awaiting word from New York on how badly Paduano injured his right hand.

Levesque had hoped to have Paduano for a Montreal appearance Oct. 16, and the young Italian-Canadian has a Nov. 14 New York engagement scheduled against former world lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz.

Paduano is 20, Durelle 31.

Bill WALKER

The image makers have taken over, and Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League just might have the screwball who will make the idea work and provide a contender as well.

The harlequin is Eddie Shack, 12-year veteran of the NHL, who was acquired in a trade this summer from Boston Bruins.

Laycoe is the new coach of the Kings, and charged with improving their lot in the NHL, and Regan is the general manager who must provide Laycoe with the material to get that job done.

All three were in town with the Kings on the weekend for the pre-season game against the Seattle Totems.

And if it hadn't been for Shack there would have been even fewer there. He was the image that sold what little was sold.

In his time he has been called everything from "The Clown Prince of Hockey" to a "Moe Norman on Ice."

For he is a roustabout by nature, as is Norman in golf, but both are extremely talented and play their favorite sports almost as well as anybody. And they never have let the lack of a formal education stand in the way of money.

And Laycoe, really, is not primarily interested in Shack for his buffoonery, but rather for his hockey ability, and he feels that Shack can serve a useful purpose for the Kings on the ice.

"Shack is bound to help," said Laycoe. "He is an experienced performer, is in fine shape, and should inspire the club with his aggressiveness.

And Shack is aggressive. Believe it.

He took a couple of runs at players in Sunday's test and was thumbed for one charging infraction.

And that is one of the raps against him. He takes too many foolish penalties. But that's his type of game — waltzing to the music of the intermission, rough and unpredictable in the game proper, fast and with a good shot, a showman always, but acknowledged as being hard to handle.

After all, he did arrive barefoot at the Kings' training camp, by helicopter, after ordering the pilot to fly over a nudist camp.

Laycoe, a stern disciplinarian, was not amused and sent Shack back from whence he had come with the remark that he didn't want any clowns on his club.

But he has him, nonetheless, and Regan apparently will look sideways at Shack's antics provided he can produce on the ice and sell tickets at home.

"We wouldn't have taken him, if we didn't feel he could help us," Regan said.

And Shack's record brings out the fact that he is an NHL player of sorts. In the past two years with Boston he did not play regularly but did accumulate 34 goals and 30 assists. And in his best season ever he scored 26 goals. Those are his attributes on ice.

And if there is an omen for the Kings, it could be that Boston started its ascendency in the NHL after acquiring Shack, and Toronto started downhill after dealing him off.

For what it's worth, Shack is box office, as Regan was quick to point out when Shack went sprawling into the corner after being upset by one of the Totems.

"Look," he said, "he's doing pushups."

And sure enough Shack was doing his thing on the ice. "And he can do 150 at a time," Regan added.

"Sure," he said. "It's true. We hope he'll put some customers into the Forum. He has to be our name."

Regan admitted that the new NHL clubs can't buy superstars or produce them overnight, thus something is needed to fill in the gap.

"Clear the track, Here comes Shack." is the song that has been written in his honor and a move already is afoot to make it a best seller in Southern California.

It is said 5,000 copies have been ordered.

That's how far the NHL has progressed since expansion.

READING ABOUT METS . . . DOESN'T WORRY ROBINSON

Brooks Isn't a 'Destiny' Believer

By GORDON BEARD

BALTIMORE (AP) — Brooks Robinson has read a lot in recent weeks about New York Mets and their ace pitchers, Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman.

It makes nice reading, but it doesn't worry the veteran Baltimore Oriole third baseman who faces the Mets in the World Series starting Saturday.

"I don't beleieve in that team-of-destiny business," Robinson said of the Mets surge to the National League pennant. "Dick Hall and Clay Dalrymple just came over to us from the other league and they both say we're better than the Mets. That's good enough for me."

As for Seaver, who won 25 games, and Koosman, a 17-game winner, Robinson tried to put them in the proper perspective.

"I hit against them in spring training and in the all-star game," he said, "and they're terrific pitchers — as good as anybody in our league.

"I don't mind telling you, I was a little scared going out to play the Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1966 World Series. But we beat those two guys Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, and these guys can't be as good as them."

Baltimore's American League champions have been installed as the 8-to-5 favorite. But, Robinson discounts this, too.

"Being the favorite doesn't mean anything," he said. "You're the favorite because they look at what you did before. Rod Carew was the American League batting crampion. How many hits did he get in the playoff? One?"

Robinson, a .234 hitter during the season, rapped seven hits in 14 appearances in the playoffs and made his usual standout stops at third base.

Earlier, Oriole manager Earl Weaver said he planned to go through the Met scouting reports today. He said he had seen several of the New Yorkers before they reached the majors and during his 11 years in the Baltimore system before moving up to the big team in July, 1968.

"Of course, they could have changed a lot since then, but not on things like speed and throwing arms."

MAGNIFICENT swimming pool nearing completion in Edinburgh will be used for swimming and diving events in the 1970 Commonwealth Games, scheduled July 16 to 25. Costing almost $4,000,000, pool is situated below Arthur's Seat, a hill in Holyrood Park. It includes a separate diving pool and provides seating accommodation for 2,500.

Hodges to Switch For Series Opener

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Mets, who scored 27 runs on 37 hits against Atlanta Braves, won't all be in the starting lineup against Baltimore Orioles in the first two games of the World Series.

While nothing may succeed like success, manager Gil Hodges of the Mets has his own method of achieving it. It's called platooning.

SHAMSKY ON BENCH

Replacing them on the bench will be:

Right-fielder Art Shamsky, the top hitter in the Braves series with seven hits in 13 at bats after hitting a powerful .300 during the regular season;

Second baseman Ken Boswell, a late season hero who hit .279 and then was a 4-for-12 against the Braves, including a two-run homer and run-scoring single in the finale;

Third baseman Wayne Garrett, a .215 hitter during the regular season who came through with 5-for-13 against Atlanta, including a two-run homer that put the Mets ahead to stay in the clincher;

THROWS SCREWBALL

However, Hodges said today that because Cuellar throws a screwball that makes him very effective against right-handers, he might make a platooning exception and stick with Boswell instead of switching to Weis.

Like all but one of the Mets, the four would be starting their first World Series. Only reliever Ron Taylor, 31-year-old native of Toronto, has played in the classic, with the 1964 St. Louis Cardinals. That, however, does not include Hodges and the coaching staff.

Hodges was in seven series as a player and coach Yogi Berra was in 13 as a player and one as a manager. Coaches Rube Walker and Joe Pignatano were in one each.

Martin Waits For Cal's Call

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Billy Martin has closed out his first year as an American League manager, and he remains evasive today whether he will continue as field boss of Minnesota Twins.

"I haven't been approached," said Martin, whose Twins lost 11-2 Monday to Baltimore and gave the Orioles the American League pennant and a three-game sweep in the divisional playoffs.

"I haven't talked to anybody," said Martin, the hot-tempered manager who knocked out one of his pitchers in a fight in August.

Twins' president Calvin Griffith, said Tuesday he plans to talk to Martin.

"I'll try to talk to him Wednesday or Thursday," said Griffith.

FIGHT WITH PITCHER

Martin jumped from one controversy to another this season. He gave a blistering critique on the Minnesota farm system for sending a rookie pitcher too far down in the minors. He got into the fight with pitcher Dave Boswell and exchanged salty verbal attacks with various opposing managers.

Martin said he would quit in August if Griffith didn't fine Boswell for starting the fight by punching outfielder Bob Allison outside a Detroit bar.

Griffith said he didn't want his manager drinking with players, and reluctantly fined Boswell.

ORIOLES HOUNDED FOR DUCATS

BALTIMORE (AP) — From the board chairman on down, the Baltimore Orioles were deluged with requests for World Series tickets Tuesday as they awaited their encounter with the New York Mets.

"I've never had so much abuse in my life," said Jerold C. Hoffberger, chairman of the board. "I've been getting telephone calls all day from people who insist they have seats near the dugouts."

"The ticket situation is bad," manager Earl Weaver said. "There's just none available. I've already used my allotment."

Pitcher Jim Palmer said he wasn't checking around to see who needed tickets, but said the higher price this year—$15 for box seats, $10 for reserved—may scare some customers off.

"At those prices, I don't even want my wife to go," he said. "It would be better for her to stay home and watch the games on television."

You Don't Stop Reed . . . Just Concede 100 Yards

"Reed? You don't stop him," Sazio mused. "You just concede him the 100 yards."

Now, after 11 games this season, Reed leads the Western Football Conference in rushing with 932 yards on 188 carries for a 4.9-yard-per-carry average, according to statistics released Tuesday.

The current rushing leader among active players, Reed's 8,565 yards is third only to former Edmonton Eskimo running twins Johnny Bright (10,909) and Normie Kwong (9,022) in the all-time CFL rushing list.

HOLDS SEASON RECORD

His career rushing attempts of 1,468 is fourth highest and he holds the season record for most carries with 302 in 1967 along with most carries in a game—37 in 1967.

Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling is the top passer with 2,511 yards on 185 of 334 passes completed for a .554 completion average and 17 touchdowns.

Ed Ulmer of Winnipeg leads the punters with 3,774 yards on 92 kicks for a 41-yard average a punt. Bobby Thompson leads on kickoff returns with 18 runbacks for 542 yards gained. Thompson's 30.0-yard average return is also the best in the conference.

COFFEY LEADS EAST

In the Eastern Conference, Tommy Joe Coffey remained on the path to a personal season scoring record during the weekend, picking up eight points in Hamilton Tiger Cats' 28-20 loss to Ottawa Rough Riders.

Coffey now leads the EFC scoring race with 111 points, just 18 points behind his personal record of 129 points scored in the 1962 season with Edmonton Eskimos. The versatile offensive end and placekicker scored a touchdown and two converts in Saturday's contest and has averaged more than 10 points a game for the 10 games played this season.

Place-kicker Don Sutherin of Rough Riders scored four converts in the same game to stay in second place with 96 points.

Name of the Game Is Still Passing

TORONTO (CP) — Calgary may have revamped its offence this year, but it's had little effect on the Canadian Football League's statistical results.

With the defection of passing ace Peter Liske to Denver Broncos of the American Football League, the Stampeders announced early in the CFL season they would present a more diversified attack.

After 11 games, statistics prove otherwise.

At the same period last year, Liske had passed 301 times and completed 183 for 22 touchdowns. His replacement, Jerry Keeling, after 11 games this year, has thrown 334 passes, completed 185 and has 17 TD tosses to his credit.

And whereas Liske had had 23 interceptions against him after 11 games, Keeling has thrown 24 to enemy defenders.

Keeling will be out to improve on his totals tonight at Canadian National Exhibition Stadium against Toronto Argonauts in an interlocking CFL game.

Argos are expected to counter the Keeling offence with quarterback Tom Wilkinson, back at the pivot slot after a one-game absence because of an injury. Coach Leo Cahill used backup quarterback Frank Cosentino in Toronto's last outing, a 36-33 win over the Alouettes at Montreal.

A victory over the Western Conference Stampeders tonight would constitute at least one Toronto first for the Argos, third in the EFC—the first time they have swept all five games with WFC teams during any one season since the interlocking schedule started in 1961.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats have already performed the feat this season, as they did in 1961, and Ottawa Rough Riders are 3-0 on the season against WFC opposition.

Fans in Puck Fracas Have Trial Date Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Three fans charged by Ottawa police following a fracas at an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game here Friday will appear Oct. 21 for trial.

Robert LaFortune, 37, of Ottawa and Douglas and Helen Rivington, both 37, of Carp, Ont., are charged with obstructing police and causing a disturbance.

Police were called to the game when a fight broke out in the stands after a stick swinging duel on the ice in which a St. Catharines' Black Hawk player, winger Fran McKey, suffered concussion and a broken collarbone at the hands of Ottawa 67s defenceman Denis Potvin.

A police spokesman said the conduct of the two players still is being investigated. They also are investigating the conduct of Hawk coach Brian Shaw who left his bench at least three times to confront heckling fans.

There was a report that at least one Hawk player swung his stick at a fan.

The three fans were released on bail. They appeared in provincial court here Monday and were remanded to Oct. 31.

Soviet Fencers Win Two Golds

HAVANA (Reuters) — With three final events completed at the world fencing championships, the Soviet Union has won two gold medals and West Germany one.

Russia won the men's team foil event Monday night, swamping the inexperienced Polish team 9-1. They also took the men's sabre event.

Friedrich Wessel of West Germany won the men's individual foil event last week, with Vassily Stankovich of Russia second. Sandy Kerkes of Montreal was eliminated in the first round of that event, losing four straight matches.

Wenman Selected To Rugby Squad

John Wenman of Oak Bay Wanderers, a first-division side in the Victoria Rugby Union, has been selected to replace an injured Vancouver Kats' player, Al Bronco, on the provincial representative team.

The B.C. XV will take on an Alberta side at 3 p.m. Saturday at Vancouver's Brocton Point.

Orioles Bounce Football Colts

BALTIMORE (AP)—The second game of baseball's World Series here Sunday has forced a shifting of the Philadelphia Eagles-Baltimore Colts National Football League contest.

The Eagles-Colts game, originally slated for Memorial Stadium Sunday afternoon, has been reset for 8 p.m. next Monday because of the New York Mets-Baltimore Orioles baseball game Sunday at the stadium.

Vaughan, Burns Lead Anglers In Annual Derby

Gary Vaughan and A. G. Burns were the major winners last weekend in the annual coho-spring salmon derby staged by the Victoria Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association.

Vaughan topped the spring (chinook) section of the derby by boating a 14-pound, nine-ounce fish. He received the F. D. Nuttall Memorial Trophy and a cash prize. Alf Clinch was second with a 14-pounder.

Burns earned the Woodward Trophy and a cash award as he weighed in the largest coho—a 13-pounder. F. Vincent was second in the coho division with a 10:13-pound catch.

Former All-Star Dies in Quebec

HOWICK, Que. (CP) — Juan Sheridan, 44, a member of Montreal Alouettes in 1949, the only year the Eastern Football Conference club won the Grey Cup, died Tuesday.

Cause of death was believed to be a heart attack.

Several times an all-star in a career with the Als that stretched for a decade from 1948, Sheridan was one of the all-time favorites with Montreal supporters.

PLAYER HAD IDEA . . . . . FOR NEW TOURNAMENT

Gary Will Still Take Arnie, Jack

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Gary Player, 33-year-old South African golf star, has come up with a novel idea for yet another tournament — teaming Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and himself against any other three golfers in the world.

Player, practising to defend his Piccadilly world match play title over Wentworth's inland course Thursday, Friday and Saturday, said Tuesday:

"Many people keep saying that Arnold and Jack are over the hill. Well, if they are, I'd still take them as my partners against any other three."

Player, Palmer and Nicklaus, for so many years regarded as the Big Three of world professional golf, now have lost that claim against rising challenge of other stars.

Bill Casper, Lee Trevino and Orville Moody are three who immediately come to mind.

Then there are Ray Floyd, George Archer and Tom Weiskopf, all from the United States.

Tony Jacklin, 25-year-old English winner of the British Open and second favorite behind Player in this tournament, could be teamed with Bernard Gallacher of Scotland and Peter Townsend of England.

The World Match Play tournament is played over Wentworth's 6,997 yards lay-out, par 36-38—74.

Stars Build for Future With Flock of Rookies

By Canadian Press

A quick look at the National Hockey League training camp roster of Minnesota North Stars and you get the impression that general manager-coach Wren Blair doesn't trust anyone over 30.

WREN BLAIR
. . . youth program

"We're not looking for a one-shot arrangement to make the playoffs and fall on our faces the following year," Blair said in an interview this week. "That happened last season and I don't plan to let it happen again.

"Sure, we could start six guys under 25 in out lineup and make mistakes, but we're building a solid foundation for the future both in Minneapolis-St. Paul and with our new Central League farm club in Waterloo, Iowa.

"St. Louis (Blues) picked up (Phil) Goyette from New York and he gives them an experienced third centre. It works for them and they'll win the Western Division again this year going away.

"But we didn't make the playoffs and we can't afford to pass up promising rookies to grab a guy who may only be around for one or two years."

With one pre-season game remaining before the North Stars open Saturday night at home against Philadelphia Flyers, 37-year-old defenceman Leo Boivin, starting his 17th NHL season, could be Blair's only "over-30" on the club.

Thirty-five-year-old Elmer Vasko, a two-time NHL all-star defenceman, will start the season with the Iowa Stars of the CHL and Bob McCord, also 35, has been assigned to Phoenix Roadrunners of the Western League.

And Blair isn't stopping there in his youth program—he may pair Barry Gibbs, 21, acquired from Boston Bruins, and 20-year-old Dick Redmond, last year with St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, on defence.

"Gibbs was an all-star with Oklahoma City in the Central League and he's got the potential to be an all-star in this league too," said Blair.

"Redmond played every exhibition game for us and he wasn't hurting our club. We need a left defenceman to round it out and he'll be a bonus for us if he's ready by Christmas.

"I've been working hard to develop a Gibbs-Redmond combination. I may just slap them together the way the (Toronto Maple) Leafs did with (Bob) Baun and (Carl) Brewer and go with them regardless."

Training Camp Emphasis on Defence

The emphasis in the North Stars' training camp has been on defence following a last-place finish in the Western Division in 1968-69 when they allowed 270 goals.

"You're kind of shook when you miss the playoffs and I guess you could say I'm only cautiously optimistic," Blair said.

"We could have the youngest team of all 12, but it will be part of our five-year building program. I haven't got one player on defence who started with us in 1967."

Lou Nanne, 29, starts his first full season in the NHL and Tom Reid, 22, may crack the North Stars' lineup after being up and down with Chicago Black Hawks.

And Bob Barlow, a left winger from Vancouver, has a chance to make a belated NHL debut at 34.

But the North Stars' strength up front will likely come from Blair's kids—Danny Grant, 23, the Rookie of the Year who had 34 goals last season, and his centre, Danny O'Shea, 24, who counted 15 in his first year in the big time.

Walt McKechnie, a rangy centre Blair compared with Jean Ratelle in his development years, gets another chance to reach his potential along with Danny Lawson, claimed from Detroit Red Wings. McKechnie is 22 and Lawson 21.

Hepatitis Source Vanishes

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI)—The source of an outbreak of hepatitis which sidelined the entire Holy Cross College varsity football team and wiped out the last eight games of the 1969 schedule may have disappeared, doctors said Tuesday.

Officials said blood tests on another 90 persons at the Jesuit-run college of 2,300 showed no signs of the liver infection which struck the entire team, including coaching staff, managers, trainer and director of sports information.

"It is possible the infection was only present in the early days of varsity football practice," said Dr. Arnold Gurwitz, head of the Worcester health department.

New Bet Record Set at Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP)—A record $5,914,195 was wagered at the 45-day harness-racing meeting which ended here last week, but the daily average showed a reduction.

The previous record was $5,694,276 for 42 days in 1968, an average of $135,578 as compared to the $131,426 this year.

Horton Back After Leafs Offer 'Frills'

By The Canadian Press

As National Hockey League clubs approach the windup of their pre-season exhibition schedule, Toronto Maple Leafs wound up a deal Tuesday night that could put them in the post-season playoffs.

Tim Horton, Toronto's all-star defenceman last year, ended his retirement and returned to the team under the same basic three-year contract terms he signed prior to last season.

However, with a few frills Leaf management calls a "consideration," Horton could realize a package estimated to be in the vicinity of $70,000. His three-year contract is reported to be about $42,500 a year.

BRAWL AT VANCOUVER

In other exhibition games Tuesday night, Los Angeles Kings downed Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League 3-1 and St. Louis Blues blanked Minnesota North Stars 4-0.

At Vancouver, Ed Joyal, with two, and Eddie Shack were the Los Angeles scorers in a game marred by a third-period brawl.

BEGAN AS SCUFFLE

Referee Eddie Gilmour handed out 50 of the game's 78 minutes in penalties after the melee which began as a scuffle between Kings' Skip Krake and defenceman Bob Lemieux of Vancouver.

The benches emptied and Shack, in the penalty box at the time, jumped on to the ice to intercede on Krake's behalf. Krake and Lemieux were hit with game misconducts and Shack with a 10-minute misconduct.

BOWER IN ACTION

Veteran goalie John Bower played the full 60 minutes, half with each squad, while Bruce Gamble and newcomer Marv Edwards put in 30 minutes each.

Gregory said the discussion with Horton, which was spread over several meetings, involved special consideration for this year only and would not affect the final year of his current contract. He termed the consideration "a sort of bonus" but would not elaborate.

Nor would Horton, who fended off questions by replying:

"Things can always change."

Another defenceman, Larry Cahan, shelved his retirement plans in Vancouver Tuesday night and will rejoin the Kings for their NHL opener Saturday night at Montreal against the defending champion Canadiens.

Eskimos Sticking With Armstrong

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos will stick with head coach Neill Armstrong and other members of the coaching staff for the rest of the Canadian Football League season.

Jack Baker, club president, said Tuesday:

"We feel this crew is still the best bet, and we feel we still have a chance to make it into the finals this season."

A six-hour directors' meeting Monday night ended with the decision to stay with Armstrong. There had been speculation he would be fired, since Eskimos lost 13-5 Sunday to British Columbia Lions, last-place team in the west.

"The directors decided that Armstrong has a better chance of getting Eskimos into the playoffs this year than any replacement we could find," Baker said.

"We examined the whole problem and decided that the best solution was to remain with the present staff until the end of the season."

Other members of the coaching staff are Ray Jauch, John Payne and Dave Skrien.

Directors were quoted as saying there would be sweeping changes before next season.

BLUES AND CANADIENS FAVORED TO REPEAT

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Hockey News Tuesday announced results of its pre-season poll conducted by 24 selecters in the 12 National Hockey League cities.

Once again the Montreal Canadiens were picked to win the East Division as they polled 137 points. Boston Bruins, New York Rangers, Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs were ranked in that order.

The St. Louis Blues were picked to represent the West in the Stanley Cup playoffs, with a total of 135 points. Following were the Oakland Seals, Philadelphia Flyers, Los Angeles Kings, Minnesota North Stars and Pittsburgh Penguins.

Injured Graham Hill Doesn't Plan to Quit

ELMIRA, N.Y. (AP) — The wife of injured British racing driver Graham Hill said Tuesday he has no plans to retire.

Asked about report that her husband, two-time winner of the world Grand Prix driving championship, planned to call it quits, Mrs. Hill said:

"No. He hasn't said a word about it, and I haven't mentioned it to him."

Doctors at Arnot-Ogden hospital, where Hill is recovering from injuries suffered in a crash Sunday in the U.S. Grand Prix, denied reports that his injuries were so severe that his racing career was over.

Hill, 40, suffered a broken right leg and dislocated left knee when his Lotus-Ford Forumla 1 car flipped over at 150 miles an hour in the race at Watkins Glen, N.Y.

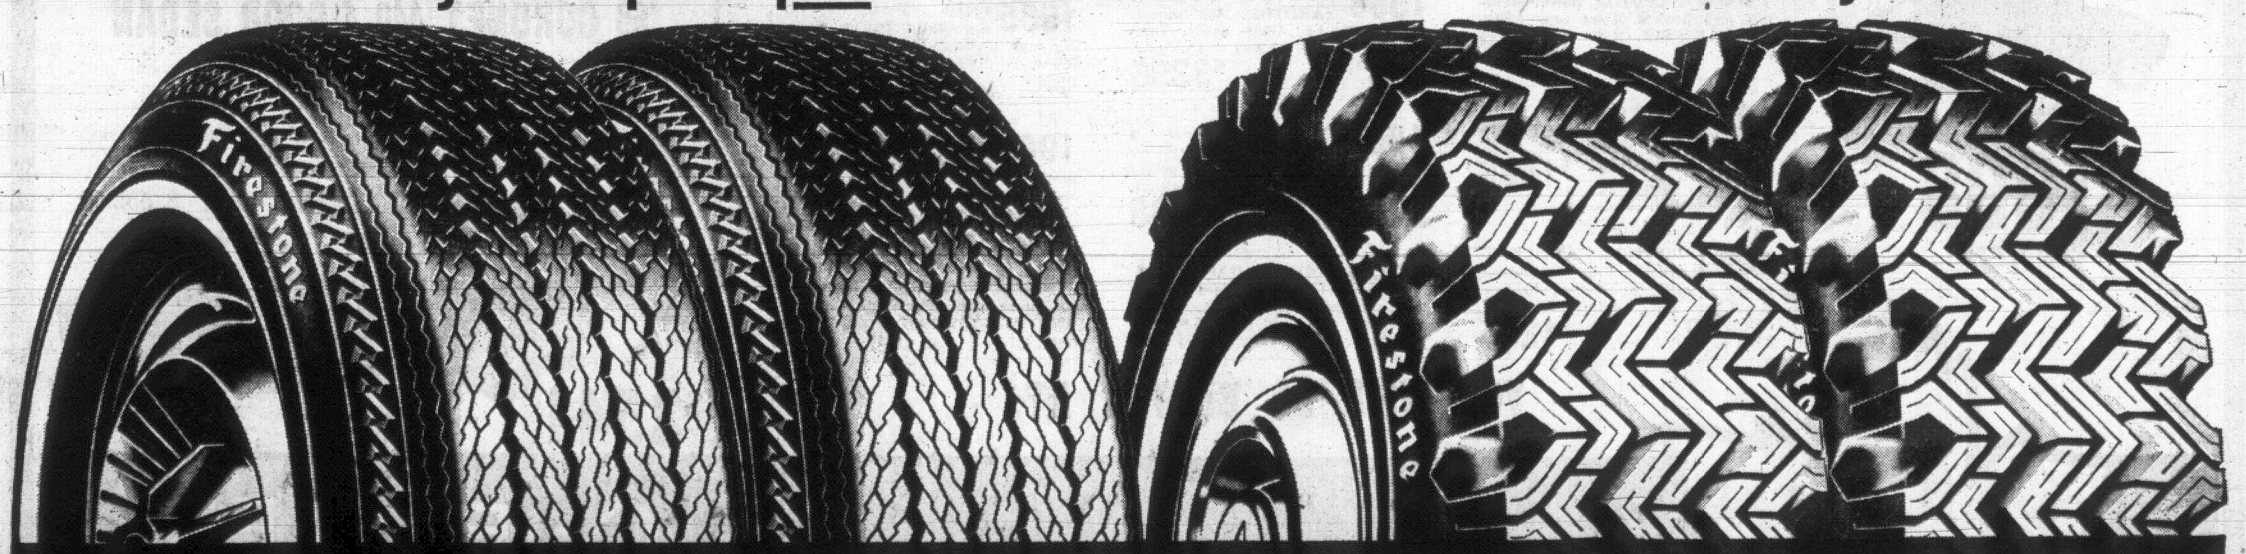

Mrs. Hill, who arrived from England Monday said her husband would be flown home if an operation is necessary. Surgery in this country, she said, would involve too long a stay.

A Quiet Parisian Idyll In a Revolutionary Garden

By DAVID LAULICHT

VERRIERES LE BUISSON (Reuters) — This quiet French suburb south of Paris with its comfortable, unpretentious villas should be the last place to look for some of the most dedicated revolutionaries in the world.

Nonetheless here, in a grey villa little different from its neighbors, is the delegation headquarters of the National Liberation Front—to 500,000 American troops in Vietnam and many more Western newspaper readers, the Viet Cong.

In their own terms the people who live here have been since June the peace-talks delegation of the provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam.

The villa, from whose upper storey floats a huge red and blue flag with a gold star, is set back 20 yards from the road. On the far side of the peaceful throughfare a family of swans glides across a pond and half a dozen local children play on its banks.

ARE CLOSER TO GOAL

The correspondent speaks of the heavy losses which the NLF has suffered. His host does not use the word "losses." He speaks of the sacrifices made. He mentions members of his immediate family who have been killed.

Yes, he says, we are closer to achieving our goals than 10 years ago, despite American intervention.

He says he has been re-reading news reports from early 1965, when the American troop buildup in South Vietnam was first reaching massive proportions, and he recalls U.S. predictions made then that the end was in sight.

The mood of determination and quiet optimism is the same in the interview which follows with the delegation head, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the NLF provisional government.

Mrs. Binh, slight in stature, with an engagingly ready smile, wears the traditional flowing ao dai dress over black silk trousers.

She is less tense than in public appearances and her voice is softer. She looks directly at her questioner with large expressive eyes as she speaks, and repeatedly asks whether he understands what she has been trying to say.

Most of what she is saying is what she says in the weekly formal meetings of the peace talks.

But, in private, both her conviction and the diplomatic evasions seem to stand out more sharply.

President Nixon has no right to demand conditions for ending the war and withdrawing American troops from Vietnam, she says.

She avoids discussion of the tactical prospects for either side. Tactical changes will solve nothing for Nixon as long as he sticks to the same goals. He must decide and if he does there can be normal relations between South Vietnam and the U.S., she says.

80 PATROL BOATS GIVEN VIETNAMESE

SAIGON (AP)—The United States Navy will transfer 80 river patrol boats to the South Vietnamese navy Friday in the largest single turnover of navy material in the war, South Vietnamese military headquarters announced today.

A U.S. Navy spokesman said the turnover is part of the U.S. program to "Vietnamize" the war so that more American forces can be withdrawn.

Pilot 70 Years Old Still Flying Daily

AUGUSTA, Me. (AP) — A Canadian First World War flying ace veteran of battles against the squadron of the famed German fighter pilot, Manfred von Richthofen, still is flying daily in Maine at the age of 70.

He is Earl F. Crabb of Augusta, who has been flying for a living for 52 years and says: "It comes second nature to me now."

As an aviator in the Royal Flying Corps, Crabb shot down five German planes to become an ace.

Crabb said his squadron duelled "at least four times" with the baron's and broke about even.

"That plane was just made out of wood, fabric and wire," Crabb said of the SE-5 he flew.

He now flies daily as an air taxi pilot for the Maine Instrument Flight School here and says the flights take him to Boston, New York and points in Maine.

He was born March 27, 1899, in Delhi, Ont. He left the Royal Flying Corps in France after eight months. He was then a captain and had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

STUNTED AT FAIRS

"When I returned from the war, there was no flying in Canada," he said, so he travelled to the United States in 1921 and took up barnstorming, flying to local fairs and putting on stunt flying performances.

He came to Augusta in 1929 and became the first pilot for the Maine forestry department. He flew for the state for 29 years.

He had a second tour of military duty with the United States during the Second World War.

He joined the U.S. Air Corps in 1942 and flew a C-45 as air inspector for the Western Technical Training Command. After three years, he was discharged a major.

Crabb's two sons followed him into aviation.

From Bea Wright's Kitchen
Roast Turkey in Aluminum Foil

Stuff Turkey just before roasting, allowing ½ to ¾ cup stuffing per pound dressed weight. Rub cavity with salt and then spoon-in stuffing. Shake bird to settle stuffing but do not pack. Close opening by placing skewers across it and lacing shut with cord. Tie drumsticks up, and grease skin thoroughly. Place on rack in shallow pan, do not cover. Roast according to chart. Allow turkey to stand 20 minutes before carving. Makes the carving easier and slices neater.

Roasting time in Aluminum Foil at 450 F.
8 to 10 lbs.—2¼ to 2¾ hours. 18 to 20 lbs.—3¼ to 3½ hours. 14 to 16 lbs.—3 to 3¼ hours. 22 to 24 lbs.—3¾ to 4 hours. When using Meat Thermometer, it should register 165° F. if inserted in stuffing or 200° F. when inserted in thigh.

Burmese Military Head of State Little-Known Personality

By JAMES M. MARKHAM

RANGOON (AP) — Gen. Ne Win, who has run Burma since he and the army took it over in 1962, is little known to his people and to the diplomats in Rangoon.

"It is not unusual for ambassadors to see Ne Win when they present their credentials and when they go—that's all," a European diplomat says.

The Burmese people see him even less.

The 57-year-old bogyoke—the Burmese word for general—lives in isolation with his second wife inside Government House, the former residence of the British governors of Burma. It is surrounded by high walls and barbed wire. At each corner security men note the licence plate of any passing car.

Four anti-aircraft guns adorn Ne Win's rolling lawns. Commercial airlines have been warned not to fly over the residence.

SOURCE OF UNITY

An avid golfer, Ne Win on the course is accompanied by four soldiers carrying Tommy guns, who scan the fairway and rough for possible assassins.

Yet this man, so sedulously guarded, is considered by even many of his nominal enemies as the only possible focus of national unity in this badly-riven country.

Ex - Communists, socialists and hangers-on who man Burma's only legal political organization, the Burma Socialist Program party, say that the general is dedicated to their cause.

He launched the "Burmese way to socialism" in 1962 with considerable gusto, and his government set about creating a Socialist society overnight. Today, with everything down to the corner store nationalized, the economy is stagnant and the black market flourishes.

Now, say those who want political and economic liberalization, Ne Win is looking for a way to break away from Marxist advisers.

Ne Win as a youth participated in the leftist freedom movement and rose rapidly in the resistance army that fought both the British and the Japanese.

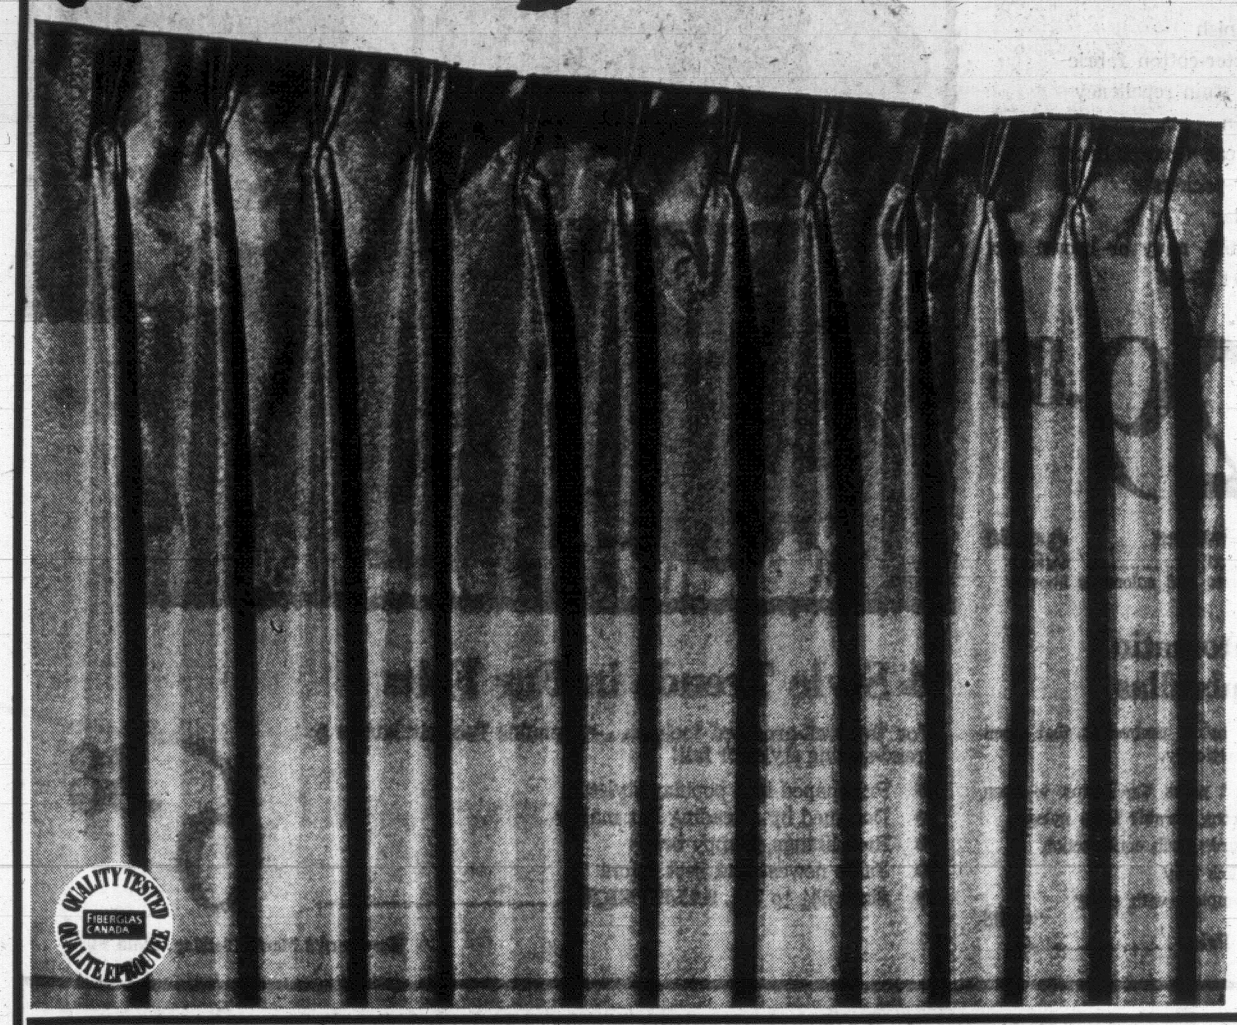

Now he heads a 13-man all-military Revolutionary Council as the supreme governing body of the country.

Ne Win rarely speaks in public and sometimes goes for months without making an official utterance.

TOPS MEMBERS MODEL TONIGHT

Students Help Chart Future of University

Ferment and dissent should be present on university campuses, Uvic's president, Dr. John Partridge, told 400 members of the Canadian Club in the Newcombe Auditorium Tuesday afternoon.

"The university is a testing ground for ideas and ideals," he said. "If either through repression or through inertia the university discourages new ideas, pressures for change will be locked up until they burst out in explosion."

At the University of Victoria, however, flexibility and goodwill have been the pattern. Destructive conflicts have been avoided, and misunderstandings have not become confrontations.

A series of subcommittees including students considered nearly 100 changes in university structure and academic programs last year at Uvic, he said. Some of the suggestions they made have been put into practice, some are still under study, and others may be put into effect this year.

"No one of these changes is revolutionary or terribly dramatic, yet in total they constitute a profound but quiet change to reflect changing conditions," Dr. Partridge said.

American influence in Canadian universities has recently become a controversial topic, he noted.

"In a university, an international flavor is desirable, and indeed almost essential.

"However, if the international were to supersede the Canadian flavor, the result would be unfortunate."

In 1967-68 Canadian universities granted PhDs to 940 graduates, but there was a demand for 2,736 new faculty members, not including positions vacated by retirement.

"In that year there was a shortage of 1,796 PhDs, just to staff Canadian universities."

The natural sciences do not have the same problem of a shortage of Canadian staff, however.

"In these fields we should make every effort to give Canadians the first opportunity for positions in our universities. This we are doing and will continue to do."

"Obviously, the matter is one of legitimate concern. It is receiving careful attention in most Canadian universities. On the other hand, it's not the occasion for panic it's sometimes made out to be."

Dr. Partridge applauded the "history of community involvement and understanding" between Greater Victoria and the young university.

"We must cooperatively devise ways in which university people can continue to hear the interests and concerns of the public."

The community must also be made aware of the activities and objectives of the university, he said.

He urged Canadian Club members to support the university when talking to friends in the community, and added that private funds were necessary to make it a superior centre of study.

"The difference between the cost of an average university and the cost of a great university must be made up by financial support from private individuals."

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY MAC LEAN

Pressing Trick Will Fix Borders

Dear May, I am having a problem with my knitting and I hope that you can help me with it.

I am knitting a cardigan for my husband. It is knit in a cable stitch with the front bands in garter-stitch. I have also started another cardigan for myself in stocking-stitch, with seed or moss-stitch borders.

In both cases the borders are knitting up tighter than the body of the sweater causing them to pull up shorter. It has been some years since I made a cardigan, but I don't remember this happening then, and I always knitted the band with the sweater. I notice in some patterns they say to knit the band separately, but on my pattern they say to knit it row for row as the sweater, so I cannot see where it would make any difference.

I am just wondering if I should just go ahead and knit it as I am doing, then press it to the same length as the sweater, or do you have a solution to this? Perhaps it works out when finished?—Mrs. C. F. D., Hamilton.

This is a problem I dealt with in the column some weeks ago. It takes almost two rows of garter stitch for one row of stocking-stitch, and this is why I nearly always advocate knitting garter-stitch front borders separately.

However, this does not say that they cannot be knitted in with the rest of the jacket quite successfully. The trick is in the pressing.

When pressing, you should never let the entire weight of the iron rest on any part of the finished knitting, otherwise the stitches will be flattened completely and your knitting ruined. And you must never, never press heavily on ribbing or garter-stitch when used in this case for the front borders.

I would say forget to press the ribbing, rather than press it too heavily, and lightly press the front borders with the tip of the iron, and leave pinned out in this posstion to dry.

The moss or seed-stitch front borders should not present this problem. If they do, treat in the same way.

This week's pattern includes gay poncho's and capes for children in sizes 6-10. They are fun to knit and quick to make on jumbo size needles. Instructions are given for both the cap and hat, as well as other knitted hats, all on the one leaflet.

To order Leaflet No. 1002, send 35 cents in coin or money order (no stamps or personal cheques please). Your order must be accompanied with a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to:—May E. Mac Lean, care of the Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering. Allow three weeks for delivery.

TODAY'S RECIPE

SCOTCH EGGS

One pound sausage meat; 1 tablespoon prepared mustard; 1-8 teaspoon pepper; 6 hard-cooked eggs; ¾ cup fine dry breadcrumbs; 1 egg, beaten; 1 tablespoon water.

Combine sausage meat, mustard and pepper. Divide in 6 equal portions and wrap a portion around each egg. Roll in breadcrumbs, then dip in combined egg and water. Roll in breadcrumbs again. Place in greased shallow baking dish and bake at 400 deg. F. until browned, about 30 minutes. Turn once during cooking. Cut into halves lengthwise. Serve hot or cold with chili sauce or mustard mayonnaise. Six servings.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Father Formulates Kitchen Catastrophe

By PENNY SAVER

When father became a baker, you couldn't see Pa for paste. His pie crust looked like plasticine and tasted worse than mine's ever been.

It took three days to clean the flour off the floor and the children asked that Father not be allowed to cook any more.

"I have one question," I said at last. "Why did you want to make a pie in the first place?"

"One of the guys at the office," he replied, a crocodile tear gathering in one eye, "brought a pie to work one day. He made it himself, Penny, and it was great. I was so sure I could do the same."

A few days later he came home triumphant.

"Penny, tonight I will make dessert, and this time I shall not fail! You can even watch if you want."

I wish I hadn't. After watching him manhandle the pastry that appeared mysteriously (more about that later) I had difficulty steeling myself to set fork into crust.

But my worst fears were overcome. The pastry was delicious, though the filling was a wee bit sweet.

As I hinted above, there was something different about that pastry. It came from a store.

This pre-prepared pie crust, I learned after a bit of digging, is made locally and can be found in the refrigerator cabinets (the above-freezing section for dairy products and the like) of grocery stores.

All Rules Broken

The people who make it have discovered the secret of making a tender pie crust. My husband rolled and re-rolled, pounded, kneaded, broke all the rules and still succeeded.

This pastry will last about three weeks under refrigeration and can be used for all kinds of pies. A 29-cent package contains close to a pound of pastry—enough to make two nine inch pies.

One we know grew tired of going through the sleeves of his white office shirts, so now, each time he buys a new shirt he reinforces the elbows with a piece of iron-on broadcloth mender.

This mender, which is also good for mending rips in sheets and pillowcases, comes in 55-cent packages and is fully washable. It is in white only.

There is also an iron-on mending tape for plastic raincoats and such. It comes in 49-cent packages. A press-cloth is used to control temperature and protect the iron.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on this column.

LIFTS FACES OUT OF LINES, WRINKLES, SAG

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Wife Wants More

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a very charming 73-year-old widower in Florida. (I am a 70-year-old widow.) It was a whirlwind romance and we married shortly after. Herbert is very well-to-do, but that is not the reason I married him.

The problem is that Herbert gave me no hint at all that he had surgery six years ago, and all he could offer me was a lovely home and a gin rummy partner.

Please don't get the idea that I think sex is everything in marriage, but I am a very youthful 70, and I was looking forward to a little more than a lovely home and a gin rummy partner.

I don't want to disgrace my children and grandchildren with a divorce. Herbert laughingly said, "If you got yourself a boyfriend, I wouldn't divorce you as long as I didn't find out about it." What should I do? — Misled.

DEAR MISLED: Most women of 70 who marry a man of 73 would be content with a lovely home and a gin rummy partner, but if you are not, don't worry about disgracing anyone. See a lawyer about an annulment. You have legitimate grounds.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this for myself and a lot of my girl friends.

There is a woman in town who is married and has small children. Her husband works nights, and while he is working this lady runs around with other men. (We know this is true because our parents have told us so.)

This lady calls me or one of my girl friends just about every night, asking us to baby-sit for her. We can use the money, but our parents have told us to turn her down. No matter how many times we turn her down, she calls again.

We think maybe if she can't get a baby-sitter she'll stay home. If you put this in your column she might see it and take the hint. — Hoping.

DEAR HOPING: Assuming your parents are right, it will take more than a hint from me, and repeated turn-downs from a long list of sitters to make this lady stay home, if she's inclined to run around.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting ready for a visit from my brother and his wife, and much as I love them both, I am dreading their visit. Why? Because they both smoke like every puff was their last.

After their last visit, I had to take everything out of the bedroom they occupied and air it two days running. Even the draperies, mattress and pillows! A strong odor of stale cigarettes still persisted, so I searched and searched and finally found an ashtray full of cigarette butts in a desk drawer!

I have come up with an idea: The next time we go to visit them I will take along several strong onions and I'd carry a slice of raw onion with me to the breakfast table and make them inhale it with their breakfast. I would carry a slice of onion with me into every room of their house, and also into their car. And upon leaving I'd hide slices of raw onion all over their house. Then they would know what it's like to try to eliminate an offensive odor which has permeated everything. What do you think? — Loves Fresh Air.

DEAR LOVES: I think they deserve it. But I'm betting against your ability to be that rude.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LILA: Beware of that guy with the intoxicated kisses. He could be mixing his drinks.

Miniskirts May Get Shorter Says Costume Historian

LONDON (CP) — Fashions of the 1970s present "an exciting prospect" to a renowned authority on costumes of the past.

"The wave of female emancipation which always follows a great social upheaval is this time irreversible," predicts James Laver, costume historian and former Keeper of the department of prints and drawings at the Victoria and Albert Museum.

The miniskirt may become even shorter—"if that is possible"—he says, "and with it there will be a new emphasis on the abdomen—the bare midriff, exposing the navel."

Laver takes a scholarly and scientific approach to the fashion phenomenon, maintaining that woman exploits the "seduction principle" of dressing to attract the opposite sex.

"Women, of course, have long exploited this principle and they have done this by the use of what the psychologists call the 'shifting erogenous zone.' In plain language this means diverting the attention to one part of the female body after another.

"In one epoch slim waists were emphasized; in another breasts were the focus of interest, at another time, shoulders or legs."

WOMAN STEPS OUT

Despite repudiation of "fluffy femininity" today's woman "is stepping out" and is "too proud of her slim, long legs to wish to conceal them."

"Tight waists and long, hampering skirts do not fit in with the picture of the modern young woman. She sees herself as the equal of men and engaged in the same activities. She has no intention of rearing a large family, and therefore will never accept a fashion which emphasizes the width of the hips."

Laver's interest in fashion began, he says, at the Victoria and Albert, where he found it a useful tool for the dating of pictures.

"The art experts would sometimes attribute a picture to a certain painter without even noticing the clothes worn by some of the figures shown. And such clothes sometimes proved that, since they were of a date later than the death of the painter named, the picture could not have been painted by him."

REFLECT EACH EPOCH

Further study convinced him that clothes have reflected their epoch "with astonishing accuracy, and that epochs which resembled one another produced clothes which resembled one another."

Two "post-crisis epochs"—after the French Revolution and again after the First World War—produced "typical post-crisis clothes."

"And it seemed to me, contemplating these things in my scholar's cell, that we might, after the Second World War, expect a similar result once fashion had settled down into a real post-crisis style.

"And so it has proved."

Emancipated as she may be, a woman still likes the occasional bit of "fluffy femininity." This example was designed by Hubert Latimer. Pink beaded polka-dots cover the brown silk-worsted gown, and the long skirt is covered in pink ostrich feathers.

Today's woman is stepping out, according to costume historian James Laver, and "is too proud of her slim long legs to conceal them. Except in pant-suits.

Damaged Sight Leads Diane To Career As Hairdresser

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP)—A girl who was nearly blind came to Canada to attend the Ontario School for the Blind. She found a friend and, with her help, a career as a hairdresser.

Diana Edmead arrived at OBS four years ago as a 15-year-old. She had fallen down a flight of stairs and injured nerves in both eyes. She was nearly sightless.

The Bermuda Association for the Blind sent her to OSB. She stayed for three years, completing Grade 10.

When Diana decided she would like to become a hairdresser she began by practising on her fellow students. She showed talent, and Miss Mollison talked to the director of the Brant School of Hairdressing, Monty Abs.

Mr. Abs had reservations, but agreed to take Diana as a student for three months, on a trial basis and he arranged with the Ontario department of labor to unravel red tape so that Diana could get her apprentice certificate.

While Diana worked to learn her trade, Miss Mollison was learning it also. Sh kept one or two lessons ahead of the class, painstakingly converting a 490-page theory text into braille.

Diana passed all her theory tests with marks in the 80s and 90s. She averaged nine out of 10 in her practical tests, and she has her department of labor certificate and a job in a Brantford hairdresser's shop.

Now she is applying for Canadian citizenship, sponsored by Miss Mollison and her parents.

Island Bastion Wealthy But Fretting Over Future

By LEONARD PRATT

TAIPEI (AP) — Chiang Kai-shek's government begins Friday its third decade on Formosa, proud of economic gains but concerned about its future role in the changing world.

The face of this island has changed greatly since the Nationalists retreated here in 1949 under the onslaught of Mao Tse-tung's Communists.

Taipei has grown from a small administrative capital with water buffalo in the streets to a sprawling industrial and commercial centre of 1,500,000 persons, with broad avenues subject to traffic jams.

American aid has all but stopped, after pouring $1,000,000,000 worth of military and economic aid into the island's economy.

Instead, Formosa now has its own aid missions in 25 African countries, one in Saudi Arabia and three in South America. The Nationalists are buying their own military equipment now, to the tune of $58,000,000 a year.

But ont thing, at least, has not changed.

The government remains under the personal control of 82-year-old President Chiang and his son and heir apparent, Ching Ching-kuo. They and their advisers in the inner cabinet of the governing Kuomintang party make all major government decisions, and their decisions are final.

Strict anti-communism, support of Chiang's government and verbal support of the long-promised return to the mainland are demanded from everyone.

Many who dissent leave the island or wind up in prison.

Within this framework the government has built a growing, liberally-run economy with business-wise tax and investment policies.

This economy has propelled the island into a position more independent and more confident than the Nationalists have enjoyed since well before the Second World War.

Government spokesmen still seek to keep Communist China out of the United Nations, but there is no longer a desperate tone in their voices. They are sure they have the votes to deny Peking a seat for some time to come.

Despite this confidence, the government knows it faces challenges new and different from those of the last 20 years. One is the problems of prosperity. Though a worker's take-home pay is the third highest in Asia, it is still less than one-third of his Japanese counterpart.

Officials are also concerned about a trend toward Japanese control of Formosa's economy.

"The island was controlled by Japan from 1895 to 1945," one official noted, "and from the number of Japanese tourists in hotels, and the number of Japanese cars and motorcycles on the streets it looks as if they're trying to get it back again."

More than one-fifth of Formosa's exports go to Japan, and officials are worried that any shift in Tokyo's policy toward Peking would deny them a market for a large part of their exports.

Okinawa is the southern link in the Japanese section of the U.S. perimeter with Communist China. An American withdrawal, the Nationalists feel, would seriously affect their security.

TORIES TO RENEW FORCES

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The Conservative party today affirmed its determination to restore Britain's military and naval presence in the South Atlantic and east of Suez if it wins the next general election.

Delegates to the annual party convention also voted to rebuild the home army and civil defence forces, both sharply curtailed by the Labor government for economy reasons.

The party rank-and-file enthusiastically cheered Geoffrey Rippon, Conservative spokesman on defence matters, when he said a Tory government would reverse the Labor government's policy of withdrawal from the Far East, the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf, and would provide the necessary naval strength and air support for British bases there.

Brazil Promised Democracy

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Gen. Emilio Garrastazu Medici, the new president of Brazil, promised Tuesday night to bring democratic government back to South America's largest country.

He said he would not tolerate the violence of the extreme left or the conservatism of the landowner-industrialist oligarchy.

At the end of my mandate I expect to leave a democracy definitively installed," Medici said in a television and radio address a few hours after the military high command chose him to replace ailing President Arthur da Costa e Silva.

One of his first steps, the 63-year-old Medici said, will be to open talks with leaders of all social strata.

He also pledged to limit the government's participation in the economy. But he is expected to continue the tight control the military has maintained since it overthrew President Joao Goulart, Brazil's last popularly-elected president, in 1964.

Medici, a close friend of Costa e Silva, has been commander of the 3rd Army in southern Brazil. He has been in uniform for 50 years, having started in a military school for boys.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

UK Labor Party Labors Most At Belaboring Own Cabinet

BRIGHTON, England (WP) — "There is something inherently unsatisfactory about a party which is still not in a position to do what it says or to say clearly what it will do.

The comment is that of Peter Jenkins, columnist of the Guardian, written during last week's conference here of the British Labor Party. The heart of the dilemma, as he saw it, is the question whether the institution is a party of protest or a party of power. The government politically is obliged to profess grandiose goals of social reform but it cannot say that it is economically obliged to follow a conservative course.

Somewhat like the Democratic Party in the United States, the Labor Party is an umbrella organization, sheltering most of the spectrum of political views, excluding the infra-red and the ultra-violet. The big difference comes in the ways the multiplicity of attitudes operates in the organizational structure.

The forces and components are not much less varied in the Labor Party than in the Democratic Party—local pressure groups, the views of the national legislators, the farmers, trade unions, bourgoisie, radicals, reformers and clingers to the status quo. But in America, all the conflicting voices make themselves better heard and somehow combine—granted, with vast cacophony—in a rhythm that a government can march to, or at least shuffle along with.

But the will of the Labor Party, insofar as it is expressed through its political institution, is made known through the annual party conference where the trade unions cast 5,378,000 of the total 6,110,000 votes, or almost 90 per cent. This grossly misrepresents the actualities of the real umbrella party.

The trade unions, or the leaders and activists of the larger ones, are still steeped—some consciously, other attitudinally—by the late-19th, early-20th century premises of the class war. Although classes have not been eliminated in Britain, those promises are nevertheless grotesquely out of date because (whether they ever made sense to begin with) the real goals of the workers and of the middle classes are now almost identical.

Yet the fight, or the battle cry, is still for ancient, no longer relevant goals. The leftists and union leaders here carried on like newly independent Africans demolishing the statues of Queen Victoria, perhaps vaguely aware that the struggle against colonialism was won but unwilling to address themselves to the real and much more difficult tasks ahead.

Although some of them give the impression of it, it is probably overstating the matter to say that the majority of the left unionists are idealogues lingering from an earlier day bent on destroying capitalist society. But they are still dedicated to getting a larger share of the pie rather than making the pie larger or keeping the baking operation going. They are the noisiest shouters for putting down Spain, Rhodesia, Greece and South Africa, but in international security matters or international economic co-operation they are true-blue isolationists. They are for ever-expanding social welfare services but against all of the measures this internationally involved banking and trading nation must take to be able ultimately to afford them. They are marvellously deaf to the painful lessons in recent years on the facts of international economic life.

Most particularly, they refuse to consider the economic consequences of an unbridled wage and income policy or of subjecting the unions to the slightest degree of outside control. The attitude of an American trade union leader, vintage 1940, would appear to them still as betrayal of the working classes.

It was essentially the issue of government wage restraints, and underlying that, the deeper issue of responsible internal and international fiscal policy, that the fight this year in the party conference was all about.

●

For the sake of the next national election, the dispute was papered over: the unionists somewhat curbed the stridency of their demands and did not force a show-down. The party leaders who form Britain's government were constrained to mutter their own objectives almost inaudibly in their throats.

The vocal leftists present the party with an unresolved issue in its bowels of the sort that could destroy it.

Linkletter's New Goal Exposure of Danger in Drugs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Art Linkletter says parents should learn the truth about drugs, alcohol and narcotics—"and get this information to their children in a rememberable, sensible, non-panic way. Repetitively."

Today, in private, graveside services at Forest Lawn Memorial Park, the Linkletter family buries daughter Diane, 20, whose death plunge Saturday he blames on LSD—"a tiger in her bloodstream."

From the Grade 5 up, the entertainer says, children "should be grounded as thoroughly in the dangers of putting chemicals into their system as they are in walking across a superhighway with their eyes shut."

TELL THEIR SECRETS

By phone, from seclusion with his wife Lois and son Robert, 24, in their Lake Tahoe cabin, Linkletter said:

"Since this has happened to Diane, you cannot imagine the number of people who have called, wired, written me—important people, well known, who have daughters in sanatoriums, sons in sanatoriums, children who have killed themselves. They have hushed this up as a terrible family secret.

"All of a sudden they're coming out and telling me," his voice choked and halted, "they'll join me. . . ."

In publicizing these evils?

"Yes," he said. "Many are lawyers, bankers, so-called community pillars of decency . . . journalists." He knows none personally.

Linkletter, 57, said he doesn't have all the answers, but "I've been as good a parent as I could possibly be, I think. We've been a very close family. We've done everything you do according to the book—taken vacations together, gone on pack trips together, travelled extensively all over the world.

"We've been a good Christian family. My wife and I have tried to set a good example by being a good example.

"We have tried to keep our children up to date on what the dangerous things are, but perhaps we did not bear down as hard as we should have."

"Diane, of all the children, was always the most daring. She was the most emotionally up and down. She was either on top of the mountain or in the alley of despair—over trivial things.

"She was the one who would dare to sneak out at night, and be willing to accept the punishment for it. If she came in later than she was supposed to come in, as she did frequently, she got a tongue lashing and took it in good spirits.

"She used to be spanked. When a child knows why he's being punished, not in anger or brutality, he should be punished. So she's had her good share of spankings.

"Of course, becoming an actress, as she was training to be, was absolutely perfect for her because she had the emotional highs and emotional lows that could have done a lot for her as a career actress. She would charm the birds right out of the trees.

LINKLETTER
. . . publicize evil

"So when I heard, indirectly, that she might be going with a group that was experimenting around, I brought it out, as I do everything.

LINES WERE OPEN

"Our lines of communication were open as far as I was concerned. I said, 'Is it true, Diane, that this group has been experimenting with some of the new things?' And she admitted that it did.

"I pointed out to her the obvious dangers. She agreed and with consummate skill acted out the part that she would never do it again. Obviously she did it again.

"Her mother would have talks with her, good long talks about what was going on among the children of today. My daughter would tell Lois what some of the other girls were doing and how worried she was.

"We now know that she probably was voicing worries about herself, worries that began to gnaw at her. She was concerned that she had quit and was having recurring highs she couldn't control.

"Over the months she found she had a tiger in her bloodstream.

"Apparently what finally happened was she was despondent over the spat with her boyfriend and took a much stronger dose of this poison than she should have. She was worried that she would never come out of it mentally, and this led to her death.

CAN'T ALWAYS PROTECT

"Parents can feel they have all the lines of communication open. But you can't live with your children all the time. They've got to be by themselves. It's impossible to create an atmosphere in which there can be no contamination."

So what can parents do? Get information on drugs from the department of health, education and welfare, or any city or state health department, Linkletter said, and get it to their children along with:

"Such things as dinnertime reading of newspaper stories that will confirm this, which is one of the reasons I gave this story to the papers.

"I want the parents, and I want their kids, to read about this and be shocked, be frightened at what can happen.

"What you have to do is not just say using drugs is a bad thing but have incontestable scientific proof. And when somebody like Timonthy Leary comes out an justifies it, we have got to jump on him with hobnailed boots. Such people are casting doubt on the authority of people who know how deadly these things can be.

"Those kids I've talked to who use it tell me that when you're on what they call a downer, with a heavy dose of LSD, every one of your faults and shortcomings stands out in stark, naked, unrelieved, unrationalized relief. There is no place to hide. It would be like standing up naked on a pedestal in a spotlight when you have warts on your body.

"We know of a sorority sister of my older daughter Sharon who was fed a (sugar) cube with heavy LSD at a cocktail party by fraternity guys as a joke, and she didn't even know she had taken it. She didn't know there was anything there. She was just taking a tidbit.

Court Halts Club Insurance Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court Monday issued an injunction preventing the B.C. Automobile Association from using its funds for an association-run insurance scheme.

Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkcson granted the injunction on application of a BCAA member who said members who voted for the insurance plan Sept. 15 were given insufficient information.

The injunction prevents the association from taking any action until the issues in question are resolved.

Member Brian Rudkin claimed in court last week that the resolution giving the BCAA power to create a new insurance firm and use association funds was approved on too little information and on irregular procedures in the membership meeting.

GORDON GIBSON ARGUES

Bar North to 'Southern' Experts

BAKER LAKE, N.W.T. (CP) — The tangled web of welfare in the north sparked angry exchanges Tuesday afternoon as the council of the Northwest Territories debated a bill to set up appeal boards for welfare cases.

The exchanges occurred as the 40th session of the council of the Northwest Territories began in this community, about 60 miles east of the territorial capital of Yellowknife.

Lyle Trimble, elected member for Mackenzie Delta, said that welfare money, whether it is given to Eskimos, Indians or whites, is often misused by the recipient.

Gordon Gibson, an appointee of the federal government to the council, said he opposed bringing in outside welfare experts to administer the proposed plan.

"We can allow local residents to oversee this plan and they will be just as effective as any newcomer to the north," Mr. Gibson said.

WANTS LOCAL BOARD

Duncan Pryde, elected member for Western Arctic, said he would like to see the welfare applicant receive a hearing, not from an area administrator, but from a board made up of the welfare administrator and two members of the local community.

"The people in the community know whether someone applying for welfare deserves it or not," he said.

Assistant commissioner John Parker pointed out that the appeal board would be made up of local residents and they would be qualified to judge cases of people who originally were judged not to be in need of welfare.

Mr. Gibson said he was opposed to experts from southern Canada working in the north.

He said the worst cases were those in which a dietician trained in the south was posted to an arctic community.

"How can people in the north be expected to obtain fruits and other so-called requirements of a balanced diet?" he asked.

"Wouldn't somebody who knows the Arctic, no matter what their qualifications, be more able to judge the diet of the people?"

Mr. Gibson said the north should concentrate on making local people aware of the problems of local communities and the Arctic in responsible positions.

. . . AND GIVE MORE JOBS TO NATIVES

BAKER LAKE, N.W.T. (CP) — A member of the council of the Northwest Territories said Tuesday a fence should be placed at the 60th parallel, cutting the territories off from southern Canada.

Gordon Gibson, an appointed member, told the council during debate on a proposed bill setting up a public employees' association that the government in the north should be willing to sacrifice some money and time in order to provide more jobs for natives.

"I'm tired of seeing people from the south come here for a job and then leave while there are so many people here who are not trained and could be receiving their training on jobs."

Gibson is a former member of the British Columbia legislature. He has interests in B.C. logging operations and hotels in Hawaii. He was appointed to the council in 1961.

S. Africans Demand Homegrown Television

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) —Public demand for television service in South Africa is growing amid increasing speculation that the government may soon be forced to allow a homegrown station.

South Africans for the first time fully realized what they were missing during the American moon landing. They were among the few people in the developed world unable to watch it on te levision.

A crown of 6,000 persons turned up at the Johannesburg planetarium—maximum capacity 500—to se a movie of the of the moon walk specially flown here. The showing had to be cancelled and police with dogs were called in to control the truculent crowd.

The movie was also shown at a special screening for government ministers. A cabinet amember said afterward, "It's spectacular . . . a revelation," He was referring not just to the moon walk, but to the fact that it had been filmed live for television.

The opposition United party prompty called for a referendum on television and sources close to the ruling National party believe it will be such a big issue in the next election that the government may have to lift the ban on a television service before then.

The government so far has spurned repeated pleas for television, although its attitude has softened considerably in the last two years.

Television's bitterest opponent was the former mail and telegraph minister, Dr. Albert Hertzog, who vetoes what he contempuously called "the movie in the little box" on moral grounds.

Hertzog was subsequently eased out of the cabinet because of his extremem right-wing views and his successor, Mattys Van Rensburg, has taken a less dogmatic stance on television.

Van Rensburg said last year that tlevision, while not "altogether evil, was a luxury South Africa could not afford.

Ottawa Bilingualism Program for Schools Gets Specialists

OTTAWA (CP) — A program aimed at making children in Ottawa's public schools bilingual is chugging along in higher gear this year.

In previous years, much of the French conversation taught to the public school board's 26,000 pupils was done by classroom teachers.

Now it is all being taught by 80 specialists, about half of them drawn from Europe.

Two pilot projects have been started in which school subjects are taught in French.

In one school, Grade 1 pupils are being taught social studies in French for half an hour a day. In another, a Grade 7 class is taking a history course in French. The course deals with the era of the French explorers in Canada.

These projects are only part of the board's developing program designed to make pupils familiar with the French language. This year, French conversation is being taught in all classes.

ADVANCE IN STAGES

Florence Bradford, who became French supervisor for the board in 1958, prepared text books 10 years ago for pupils from Grades 2 to 8.

Using her method, pupils advance in four stages—from comprehension of French, to studying in that language and then reading and writing it. The objective is fluency.

George Peacock, the board's chief superintendent, says that at the end of Grade 8, pupils sincerely interested in French can become quite fluent in it.

For the keener language students, special Saturday classes taught by specialists have been carried on for five years.

The board's policy has been that pupils should be prepared to become bilingual by the end of Grade 8. But now Eileen Scotton, the board chairman, says that real bilingualism by Grade 8 must be the goal.

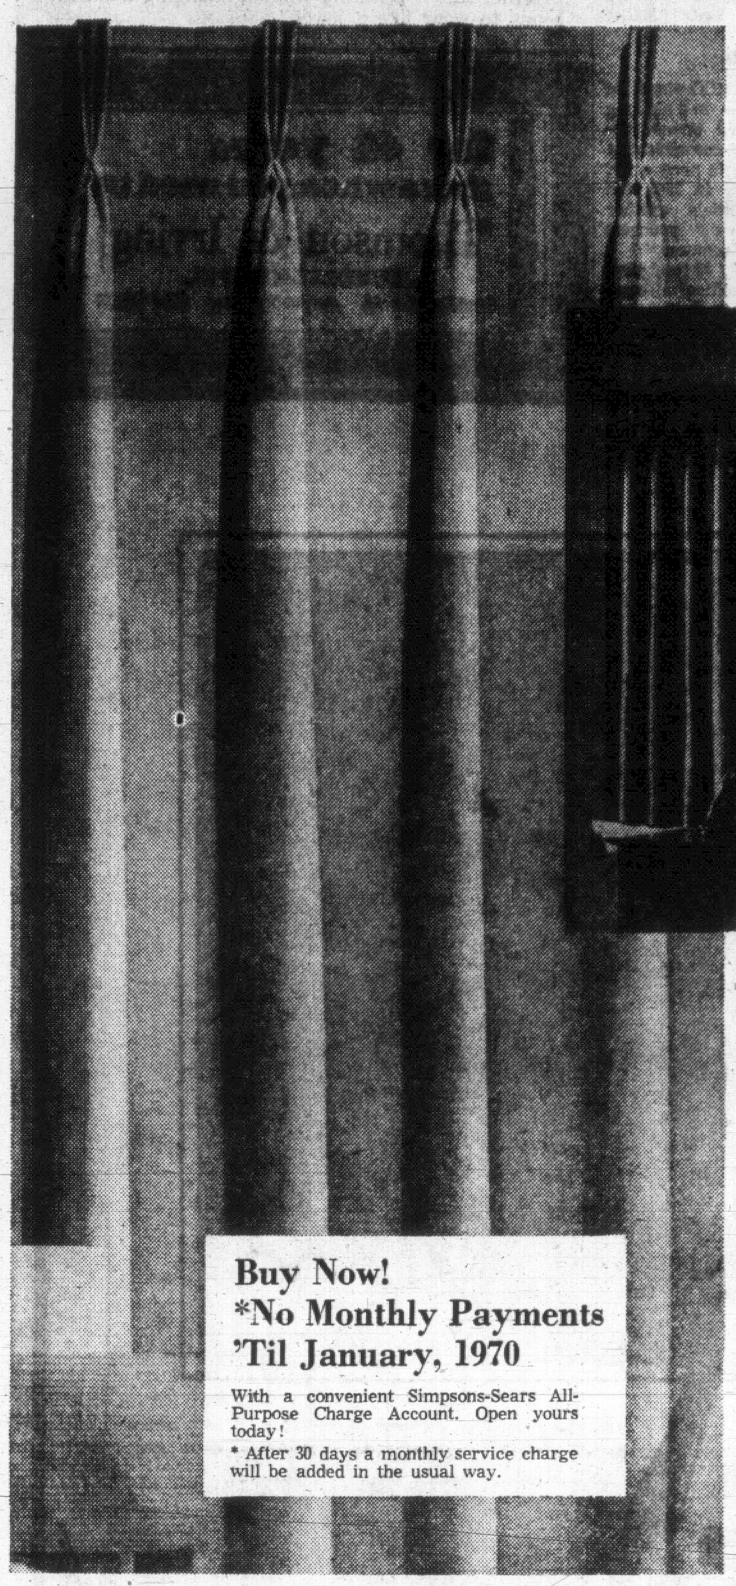

"A great number of parents would like a more vigorous bilingual program," Mrs. Scotton said in an interview. "But we can't use compulsion.

Scandinavians Stage Protest In Moscow

By ANTHONY ASTRACHAN

MOSCOW (WP) — Two young Scandinavians were arrested Monday after handcuffing themselves to a railing in GUM, Moscow's largest department store, and making at least a thousand Muscovites aware that there are dissidents in the Soviet Union.

Just before 5 p.m., an intense-looking, slim young man with a slight moustache and a pretty, short, dark-haired girl wearing a stylish black pants suit of a kind seldom seen in Moscow, hurried to opposite sides of a circular balcony on GUM's second floor.

They scattered leaflets to the rush-hour crowd around the huge fountain below and handed them to passers-by. Then they handcuffed themselves to the balcony rail, while the astonished crowd looked at the single-page protests and either crumpled and dropped the sheets or folded them into pockets and handbags.

The leaflets, in Russian, appealed to Soviet Premier Kosygin to release retired Maj.-Gen. Pytor Grigorenko or promise him a fair and open trial. Grigorenko was arrested last May in Tashkent, where he had gone to defend Crimean Tatars protesting what they said was a denial of their national rights by the Soviet authorities.

The leaflet identified the two demonstrators as Harald Briston of Oslo and Elizabeth Lie of Uppsala, Sweden. It said they would stage a hunger strike "at the place of our demonstration" until Grigorenko was released or Kosygin had given them a guaranty that he would have an open, legal trial.

Things transpired differently. The crowd gathered around each of them, but for a few minutes nobody identifiable as a police officer appeared and there was always at least a foot of space between Miss Lie and the people. Some tried to ask her what it was all about, but her Russian was not good enough for a meaningful answer.

Then a tough-looking man in civilian clothes came up and searched Miss Lie's handbag, apparently either for more leaflets or for the key to the handcuffs. He found neither. More plainclothesmen, some of them very sophisticated-looking, and a few uniformed police came and went.

In another five minutes two hacksaws were produced and plainclothesmen sawed open the stainless steel cuffs linked by black chains. Miss Lie was led off by two plainclothesmen who held her upper arms and hurried her along, followed by a woman who also had the look of authority. Plainclothesmen led Briston from the opposite side a minute later. It was roughly 20 minutes from the start to the arrest.

Past demonstrations were usually held in open places, mostly Red Square, Mayakovsky Square and Pushkin Square. One, in April, 1965, involved a mile-long walk through Moscow but the rest were all broken up by the KGB in two or three minutes. People threw away leaflets rather than look at them in the open. The crowds were thin and melted fast.

●

The "Initiative Group for the Defence of Civil Rights in the Soviet Union," which claims responsibility for most recent protests, or at least for getting word of them to Western newsmen, has moved quietly. Most Soviet citizens were unaware of its existence unless they listened to foreign news broadcasts.

Monday's demonstration, in contrast, had an almost captive audience among the GUM patrons. (GUM stands for the Russian words meaning state universal store and is pronounced "goom.")

The site was in the centre of a building constructed in three long galleries open to the roof four storeys above, with shoppers moving on balconies on the storeys above the ground and on baclony transverses from gallery to gallery. People were drawn to the centre fountain from four directions to see what was happening. They stayed for the full 20 minutes and broke up only slowly afterwards.

Many people in the crowd seemed to share the opinion of one woman who muttered, "It's a provocation."

One woman, however, asked by a friend if she knew what it was all about, opened her purse to show the leaflet folded away as though meant for future reference, and said "It's to Kosygin."

The leaflet expressed fears for Grigorenko's life while in prison because of his age (62) and health. It also expressed fear that he might be put in a mental institution, as he was in 1964. This is a standard Soviet punishment for malcontents.

It called Grigorenko "a convinced defender of legality and the declaration of human rights, a document that has been recognized by the Soviet Union and the UN," and described him as one who had fought for respect for Soviet law and defended those persecuted for their convictions.

The leaflet mentioned Grigorenko's role in the Civil Rights Cause Generates Activism Within Russia Too

Second World War "struggle against Fascism" and told Kosygin, "Your government speaks in support of those who struggle for human rights in Greece, Vietnam, South Africa, etc. Why are those who struggle for the same rights in the U.S.S.R. arrested?"

It also gave a biography of Grigorenko and carried pictures of him (in full uniform with all his mdeals) and Kosygin.

Finally, the leaflet quoted from the initiative group's May appeal to the United Nations that Grigorenko signed: "The last arrests make us think that Soviet punitive organs decided to stop the actions of people who protest against tyranny in our country."

The leaflet carried the names of Danish, Swedish and Norwegian committees of SMOG. SMOG was a group of Soviet students, poets and other noncomformists that staged demonstrations here but has not been heard of since 1966. No foreign connection was previously known.

(Protestors Yuri Galanskov and Alexander Ginsburg, who reportedly participated in SMOG demonstrations, were accused of links to the anti-Soviet emigre organization, NTS, at their 1968 trial. They denied the accusation. Grigorenko's defence of them on this charge was explicitly mentioned in the SMOG leaflet Monday.)

●

The initials SMOG stand for Russian words meaning audacity, thought, image, profundity. Komsomolskaya Pravda, the youth newspaper, attacked SMOG in 1965 and gave the initials another meaning: "Very youngest organization of geniuses."

Two other sets of foreigners have made political demonstrations here in the past 18 months. Both were deported within days after they demonstrated.

NATION-BUILDING IMPORTANT GOAL

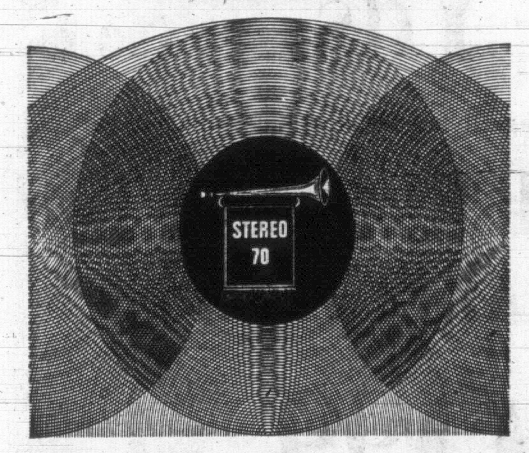

VANCOUVER (CP)—There is more to life than selling chocolate bars and cigars, Phil Gaglardi told the National Association of Tobacco and Confectionery Distributors Tuesday.

"Let's get on with building the nation," said the Social Credit MLA for Kamloops. "This nation has a great future. We can destroy it or link it together like a beautiful woman stringing a set of beads to wear like a jewel."

Glinz Lake's Camp Thunderbird A Story of Growth and Hopes

By ELIZABETH FORBES

On a recent Saturday afternoon I joined others of the YM-YWCA general and advisory boards for a visit to Camp Thunderbird. As I remembered it in the days when Canadian Girls in Training held summer sessions there, the trail in was so rugged automobiles were usually left down at the Sooke Road and everyone hiked up to the camp.

Forbes

This time, while the trail is still rugged, our cars made it easily.

When we arrived we found about 70 young men and women from 12 to 20 years of age, in camp for the weekend.

Coached by Art Burgess, YM-YWCA physical director, they were learning the basic principles of leadership for junior, intermediate and senior classes active at the "Y" during the fall and winter season.

SWAMP THEN

On a playing field I remembered in earlier days as a swamp (it's been reclaimed with earth fill and sawdust) games were being organized and directed and then ideas were being suggested to make them more effective.

We sat on rustic seats at the edge of this field in the sunshine, and watched.

Glinz Lake gleamed blue and clear in the background. Up on the hill behind us were the rows of sleeping cabins, an old dining hall and cookhouse (now a craft shop), and a newer dining hall with a well-equipped kitchen attached.

In former days the pulpit up there was a tree stump with a flat board on top. This has now been replaced by a rustic wooden pedestal with an open Bible carved in the flat top. It was given to the camp by the Ys-Men's Club, in memory of one of its presidents, John Peat.

That afternoon, the leaders' program ended with a paper chase through the woods and around the lake.

EARLY DAYS

As we watched them start off, Vivian Shoemaker, a former YMCA general secretary, told me a little of the beginning of Camp Thunderbird and how it grew.

Start was made back in the early '30s when Mr. Shoemaker was boys' work secretary and camp director. Summer camps were held then at various places and the YMCA was looking for a permanent site.

"We had just about given up hope," Viv Shoemaker said, "when someone told us the Glinz brothers had acreage in the Sooke hills they might be willing to sell."

An option was taken on some of that land and in 1935 an experimental camp was organized at Glinz Lake. It proved so successful it was decided to try to buy 360 acres around the lake. An anonymous gift of money made it possible to complete the deal.

This was in the depression years of the '30s and while the YMCA now had land for a campsite it had no money to develop it.

WORK CAMP

The government had organized camps to help single men who could not find work and it was suggested one camp be established on Glinz Lake.

These young men spent one winter there and during the time cleaned up the foreshore, made a trail around the lake and built the first dining hall, cookhouse and cabins.

Then came the Second World War and nothing more could be done at the campsite.

When Vivian Shoemaker returned to the YMCA after the war he was "shocked" at the deterioration at Glinz Lake.

A ways and means committee immediately went to work and after much deliberation it was decided to sell some of the timber on the place to obtain money for expansion and repairs.

With this "kitty" and the continued volunteer efforts of members of the Ys-Men's Club the camp was rebuilt as it is today.

Gradually as land was logged off around the perimeter of Camp Thunderbird "and when funds were available to buy at nominal prices," succeeding boards of directors were far-sighted enough to increase the holdings.

Today the original site has been expanded to 1,000 acres of lakes, streams, meadows and natural forest lands.

"In this day of urban sprawl we have a natural park in the Sooke Hills," Viv Shoemaker says, "that we envision as being there far into the future.

"It gives us room to conduct camps, hikes and overnight safaris, all on our own property."

Of course, there is also a dream for the future. "It's come to life in the last few years . . . but it needs money to make it a fact. Some day . . . perhaps . . ."

The dream is to build on the far side of Glinz lake, a completely new campsite that could be kept open all year around.

At present Camp Thunderbird must be closed in the winter. A caretaker is in charge and the cabins, the craft shop and the dining hall are deserted.

RESEARCH SUBMARINE RESCUED

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The research submarine Deep Quest was freed from its heavy recovery device early today and rose to the surface 12 hours after the craft and its four crew members became trapped 432 feet deep on the Pacific Ocean bottom.

A two-man 8,000-pound submarine, the Nekton, used its mechanical arm to snip the plastic rope that was tangled in one of the Deep Quest's two aft propellers. The rope was attached to a scoop-like recovery module, a galvanized culvert used to retrieve heavy test samples from the ocean floor.

Drugs Bring Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Albert DeGarie, 18, was sentenced to seven months Tuesday for selling hashish to a Vancouver policeman. Carolee Jacobson, 22, received a six-month sentence for selling LSD to two undercover RCMP agents.

Impeccable Victoria Trio Could Make Music History

By AUDREY JOHNSON

At rare intervals the person whose job it is to listen to and evaluate musical performance, is rewarded with an experience well beyond anything he normally hears, even under the best of circumstances.

Tuesday noon time provided such a moment of exhileration in the University of Victoria concert series.

In a hushed and student-packed MacLaurin auditorium, the Victoria Trio played one of the most beautiful chamber works of all time — Beethoven's B flat "Archduke" Trio.

Outside major cities one would not ordianrily hope to hear a performance as good as this except for occasional visits by the world's leading ensembles.

IMPECCABLE

But here we were, listening to a resident trio — Robin Wood, piano, Jack Kessler, violin, James Hunter, cello — whose performance recalled for me the thrill of first hearing the Paganini Quartet, and which certainly has not been notably surpassed by any major group that has come my way since.

Everything was impeccably right. Balanace and interchange were exquisitely poised, dynamic levels were scaled immaculately from purest pianissimos to full but never pressed fortissimos.

Phrases were "felt" through and sculpted, for instance in the lovely andante cantabile movement, as though one fine musical intelligence was guiding one gifted pair of hands on a single multi-voiced instrument.

After this spirit-warming and refreshing experience, one can only hope to hear the Victoria Trio again and soon.

CBC REPLAY

It is, providing it can be sustained, the beginning of something that could make musical history in this city.

The Victoria Trio was in Vancouver recently where they recorded the "Archduke" for a CBC Festival AM and FM broadcast at dates and times to be announced.

On Oct. 29 the ensemble will perform the Shostakovich Trio at University of British Columbia. This will also be recorded by CBC for broadcast purposes.

Law Schools Veto Class On Etiquette

TORONTO (CP) — Deans of law at five Ontario universities disagree with a provincial judge who claims law schools should teach budding young lawyers "courtroom etiquette and decorum," including proper dress for court.

Judge Tupper Bigelow, in an article in the current issue of the Ontario Magistrates' Quarterly, of which he is editor, says:

"Surely a lawyer should know better than to show up in court dressed in a blazer or sports jacket with contrasting slacks or in ... screaming ties, loud shirts and Carnaby Street suits."

Approach to Culture Education Excites Art Centre Director

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — The approach to culture in schools throughout Canada may never be the same after this winter.

At least that's what Ron Singer, youth program co-ordinator for the National Arts Centre, hopes.

He says he and his co-workers are excited about the program they have designed to interest both elementary and high school students in Canada in the arts.

In an interview, Mr. Singer said the centre is arranging national tours for some companies.

Les Jeunes Comediens, a company of young actors sponsored by Montreal's Theatre du Nouveau Monde, will visit schools in all 10 provinces. Les Feux Follets, Canada's national folk ensemble, will also make a special school tour.

Educational television broadcasters across the country have been told that they can film companies at the National Arts Centre.

GET CLOSER LOOK

An educational broadcast might be arranged to show a ballet or drama company during rehearsal, for instance, something Mr. Singer thinks would give many school students a fascinating look on the inside.

The centre also has a student award project under which students chosen by various school boards are flown to Ottawa for a special weekend. They learn about the performing arts by attending performances and taking part in seminars.

The approximately 2,000 school boards across Canada have also been invited to arrange trips to the capital, Mr. Singer said. The boards would be given discounts on performance tickets.

THROW STUDIO OPEN

Mr. Singer sees the arts centre's youth program—which includes an extensive schedule for the capital region—as unique.

"Before it was organized, I travelled to centres specializing in youth programs," he said. "We certainly have a far more extensive program than has Lincoln Centre in New York."

Among the numerous projects arranged under the youth program, the National Arts Centre has offered to make its studio available for the Canadian University Drama League's annual festival.

In addition, drama students who have the permission of a company's director will be allowed to watch that company in rehearsal.

There will be seminars and workshops for teachers and a film festival for students as well as a showing of films made by students.

And members of the centre's orchestra and its theatre companies will go into local schools for teaching and lecture purposes.

Funny Honey Crime

MOSCOW (AP) — A man has been sentenced to seven years for illegally manufacturing 20 tons of artificial honey and selling it for 24,000 rubles ($26,400). The labor union newspaper Trud revealed Monday that N. Poladov was convicted of engaging in private enterprise and misrepresenting his product as natural honey.

Nurses Getting Wrong Training

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Nurses may be educating themselves right out of delivery of health care to patients, Dr. W. S. Hacon, director of health resources for the federal government, said Tuesday.

"There is no doubt that the education nurses are receiving today is other than that needed to fill the gap between highly trained physician and registered nurse."

Dr. Hacon, co-ordinator for a national health manpower conference which opened Tuesday, said nursing education beyond the diploma level "is not clinically oriented" and tends toward administration.

It is problems such as this that the 200 invited participants will be discussing for the next three days. Consumers, government planners, associations of health professions including doctors and nurses, and medical educationists are taking part.

The conference is jointly sponsored by the federal government and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. The aim is to find guides to plan health care delivery for the next 10 years, to determine numbers and quality of manpower and to plan health care education.

Dr. Hacon said participants will reach their own conclusions, but in his view, the gap between doctor and nurse training will be filled by several groups.

TECHNICIANS FILL GAP

These would include "retread nurses," who have taken other kinds of health care training after getting their diploma, medical technicians and assistant physicians with four or five years' medical training after high school.

Dr. Hacon said there is resistance to this from doctors, nurses and the public, but decisions on changing the structures of health professions were essential before future manpower requirements could be determined.

New techniques of management such as cost-benefit analysis now made it possible to determine whether health care targets could be reached, and at what cost.

Given the designation of targets and the analysis of the steps to reach them, the public, which pay the bill, would have the basis for making decisions about alternative courses of action.

Dr. Hacon said he believes that in those circumstances Canadians will be willing to invest more of the national wealth in health care, but they would have to be convinced that such targets as adding 10 years to everyone's lifespan could be reached at a reasonable cost.

Canadian Travel Bureau Wins Award

OTTAWA (CP) — An award for the "most courageous and imaginative" direct mail campaign was awarded recently to the Canadian government travel bureau.

The bureau's campaign was also named one of the top 50 best direct mail promotions by the Direct Mail Advertising Association.

Don Bythell, the bureau's assistant director of marketing, said the campaign, which is aimed at the United States travel market as a major part of the promotional program intended to increase Canadian tourism revenue, will help bring in more than $1,000,000,000 from tourism in 1969.

The bureau sends more than 6,000,000 letters to U.S. citizens each year, and as many as 50,000 replies have been received in a single day.

WHY ARE YOU READING THIS?

Are you looking for an easy job and high pay?
Are you interested more in yourself than in others?
Are you seeking a thirty-hour week?

If "YES" to the above — we can't help you.

The person we seek — works a sixty-hour week
The pay he receives — hard to believe
End of the day — count your pay
All others come first — this is not the worst
The training is rough — have you read enough?

There are good points we'd like to discuss
To hear about these is a definite must
This Saturday morning at nine
In downtown Victoria we'll see you then
895 Fort St. near Quadra that's sure
Please take the elevator to the 3rd floor
Room 306 — We'll be waiting for you
If you wish you may bring a friend too.

The time is nine and not at ten
If you are late, we won't ask again.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is without qutstion Channel 8's 7:30 feature, Captain Newman, M.D. (Channel 6 at midnight). Gregory Peck is Newman, army psychiatrist in a soldiers' hospital in the southern part of the United States during World War Two. And Tony Curtis is his irrepressible orderly, a cynical, conniving, generous ambulatory psychotic who was assigned in typical bureaucratic fashion becuase he had formerly been a patient in a mental hospital. Taken from the best-seller by the same name, Captain Newman is one of the few filmed novels that actually comes out on the scretn as well as it did on the printed page.

NATURE OF THINGS — 7:30, Channel 2. Tonight's program is third in a six-part report on pollution. Water is the subject and tonight's production examines how water is distributed in the environment, how it purifies itself, and the limitations of man's water supply. Man's abusive influence on water resources is shown with examples of pollution in Canada. The Fraser River and two eastern watercourses are shown as examples. John Livingston is host.

ROOM 222 — 8:30, Channel 4. "The Coat." Denise Nicholas, playing the role of counsellor Liz McIntyre, is the focal point of this interesting tale. Liz bends over backwards to get a hostile student a part-time job, and he runs around and steals a fur-trimmed coat to repay her. The touchy situation is handled well and the outcome is realistic. Miss Nicholas is very good and should be given more to do on this series. (Color).

BOOK BEAT — 8:30, Channel 9. Tonight's offering is an interview with author Theodore White (Making of the President 1968). White offers general comments on the American political scene, with specific reference to the 1968 campaign and its contenders for the presidency.

DRAMA SPECIAL — 9, Channels 2, 6. Rural Ontario is the setting for this CBC production. It's the story of a young girl's attempts to improve her lot. Shackled to a life of drudgery since her mother left home, Dulcima finally leaves charge of her seven younger sisters and unemployed father for a job as a housekeeper. Her employer, a hard-drinking farmer of affluence, is willing to offer her a home — but not marriage. Jackie Burroughs stars as Dulcima.

GLEN CAMPBELL HOUR — 7:30, Channel 7. Tom Jones covers all bases playing guest spots while taping his own series in Hollywood. Jones and Campbell hook up for a big medley of tunes include "Hey Jude" tonight. For contrast, plump non-stop-talker Totie Fields tries slapstick ballet in a "Sleeping Beauty" routine, and chatters while debating between a dinner date with Campbell or Jones. Vocalist Jackie DeShannon sings a duet with Glen, and Jones returns for two solos later on.

THE COURTSHIP OF EDDIE'S FATHER — 7, Channel 6; 8, Channel 4. "The Littlest Kidnapper." Cute show. Eddie takes it into his head that Mrs. Livingston (Miyoshi Umeki) should have a little boy of her own and coaxes an Oriental classmate to come home with him. The problems are many since the lad won't disclose who he is or where he lives. It turns out his parents are separated, which sets the stage for some homey sentimental philosophizing.

THEN CAME BRONSON star Michael Parks. (10, Channel 5)

MUSIC HALL — 9, Channel 5. If you're a fan of Terry Thomas' comic style, be sure to tune in tonight. He's the star of a number of skits, but the longest and funniest is his "little chat on the subject of "doors", appropriately illustrated and orchestrated. Other highlights include Michele Lee's production number to "Runnin' Wild"; Hines, Hines and Dad's "Sweet Georgia Brown," and "Walkin' on New Grass," with the trio plus host Wayne Newton; and a concert spot at the end featuring Newton's songs, "Blowin' in the Wind," "What Kind of Fool Am I", and "The Lord Must Be in New York City."

ON BEING BLACK — 10, Channel 9. "Johnny Ghost." Again, an actress provides a memorable performance in the second drama of this moving series. Cicely Tyson is wonderfully exciting in a small but vital role, playing the wife of a boxer who has lost his title to a man he considers unworthy to be an example to the black youngsters on the block. Though the play itself by Phillip Hayes Dean is more effective for its encounters between characters and their relationships, rather than its telegraphed plot and much too innocent hero, it benefits enormously from powerfully written and well played scenes in which our deluded ex-boxing champ is asked to face the truth.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

9:00: Channel 4: Two for the Road (1967 drama). Audrey Hepburn, Albert Finney.

12:00: Channel 8: Strange Bedfellows (1965 comedy). Rock Hudson, Gina Lollobrigida, Gig Young.

1:30: Channel 13: Down Memory Lane (1949 comedy). Steve Allen, Franklin Pankborn, Bing Crosby.

FOR THIS BRAND NEW
6-BEDROOM HOME

Exclusively built for the family that desires space. Located in one of the most prestigious Oak Bay districts, near the University. A new home with an Old Country Tudor style touch. Nearly finished.
After opening the massive front door you find yourself in a warm and inviting hall. Seven easy steps take you to the tremendous 15x23 foot living room with bay window. It features recessed fireplace lights with dimmer switch. The 12x13 foot dining room will accommodate any size family. It opens up onto the gigantic sundeck, designed to use your summer meals outside in privacy while overlooking the countryside. The large kitchen has double stainless steel sink, an enormous amount of cupboard space, a fan and a desk. It also has a door leading to the sundeck for easy serving of mealts outside. The large 12x16 foot master bedroom contains a full 4-piece bath and 3 full size closets. There are 2 more bedrooms on this floor, one of which would make an ideal den. Please note that there is yet another full bathroom on the main floor.
On the lower floor you will find a second large living room or study, luxuriously finished, with fireplace and dimmer switch fireplace light. There are 3 bedrooms on this floor, one of which would make an ideal 16x16 foot rumpus room. The bathroom on this floor is full 4-piece. The laundry room is beautifully panelled and contains a vanity wash basin. All rooms on the lower floor have golden ozite carpet. In the large furnace room with a 160,000 BTU oil furnace there is space left for your work bench. And last but not least is the double carport at the rear that will hold 2 big cars. Want to see this house? Just phone 383-7115 anytime.

MEDIATION UNPRODUCTIVE

UN Mid-East Effort Ends

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — UN Middle East representative Gunnar Jarring will conclude his mediation efforts here today because they have not been productive. He is returning to his regular post as Swedish ambassador in Moscow.

Jarring has been in New York since September 15, conferring with Arab and Israeli foreign ministers as well as with representatives of the four major members of the security council.

His return to Moscow at this point represents a blow to those who have hoped that Rhodes-type negotiation between the Arabs and the Israelis could be started in New York even before the advent of new four-power talks among the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

The four-power talks are scheduled to resume here later this month following additional bilateral talks in Washington between Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco and Anatoly Dobrynin. Three long sessions here between Secretary of State Rogers and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko failed to produce a breakthrough.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad and Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban both have referred to the1949 negotiations on Rhodes through Dr. Ralph Bunche that led to an armistice, although each country has a different interpretation of the process.

Israeli sources contend, however, that Jarring is unlikely to be able to start negotiations so long as the Arabs believe that Soviet-American or four-power discussions will spare them from meeting directly with Israel.

These Israeli sources also say flatly that Israel will not agree to any document emerging from two-power or four-power talks that makes speciifc suggestions on such questions as boundaries in an interpretation of the Security Council resolution of November 22, 1967. Such matters, they contend, must be left to Arab-Israeli negotiations.

The Egyptians have argued all along that Jarring should set a "timetable" for implementing the resolution with respect to Israeli troop withdrawal and other portions, and that any contact with the Israelis should be indirect.

Jordan, which is generally felt to be more eager to make peace with Israel, has awaited a lead from Egypt and has not encouraged separate negotiations.

Secretary of State Rogers plans to return here tonight for two additional days of conferences with ministers who are in New York for the general assembly, but American sources said these talks probably will not concentrate on Middle East problems.

Canada-France Rift Grows With New Diplomacy Crisis

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — A new diplomatic crisis is boiling up between Canada and France leading to the possibility of a sharp Canadian diplomatic protest in public and even the temporary recall of the Canadian ambassador in Paris, informants disclosed today.

The informants included a Canadian diplomatic sources with an inside track on relations between the two countries.

The latest acrimonious outburst centres on the decision by Deputy Foreign Minister Jean Lipkowski of France to bypass Ottawa in his week-long visit to Quebec and his "impolite" treatment of Ambassador Paul Beaulieu.

Lipkowski flies to Quebec Thursday. Canadian diplomats heard about plans for the trip last March and at the end of August officially invited Lipkowski to visit Ottawa at the same time. The Canadian ambassador has still received no official reply though he had been advised unofficially that a trip to Ottawa is impossible at this time, informants said.

BENNETT AT LUNCHEON

Another indication of a diplomatic slight to the ambassador came when Lipkowski decided to hold a luncheon for visiting Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia.

The luncheon took place Tuesday and informants said Lipkowski issued his invitations 10 days previous. The invitation to the Canadian ambassador was not issued until the day before the luncheon. The ambassador nevertheless turned up.

Informants said Prime Minister Trudeau is seriously concerned about the deterioration in relations with the new regime. When Charles de Gaulle stepped down as president, Canadian authorities had hoped that the election of Georges Pompidou as president would usher in a new and happier era of relations between France and Canada. The signs pointed to a more liberal attitude but Canadian hopes were short-lived.

Canadian diplomats are reported to have pressed the French government about the cooler attitude. Informants said they were advised privately that the Canadian government had to be patient.

The argument made on the French side is that Pompidou has to appease a heavy Gaullist majority and that while a lot of old policies could be discarded, foreign policy was one that Pompidou found easiest to retain. When the point was made that retention of the old Gaullist policy on Quebec would be embarrassing to Trudeau, the response was that was a problem for Trudeau. The new French regime was simply not interested, informants said.

In time the French regime might be in a position to follow a more harmonious policy but there could be no major departure in this current period, French officials were reported to have added.

SITUATION TOUCHY

Informants concluded that the situation is critical and that it likely will spill into a public outburst. The Canadians were considering what steps should be taken. One course might be to make it more difficult for France to do business in Canada. Another might be the temporary recall of the ambassador "for consultations."

A possible way out of current difficulties is agreement by Pompidou to visit Ottawa during his trip to the United States next February.

Canadian diplomats apparently are quietly exploring the possibility of Pompidou responding to a Canadian invitation if one is tendered. But informants declined to say how far this exploration has gone or what the response has been.

'Morning After' Pill Blocks Pregnancies

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A "morning after" contraceptive given to hundreds of college co-eds has been 100 per cent effective when taken soon enough after intercourse, a Yale University physician reported Tuesday.

Dr. John Morris said heavy doses of commonly used estrogens have been administered in the days immediately following sexual activity to 300 to 400 girls at Yale since 1965.

"We've had no pregnancies in anyone who took multiple dosage in adequate time," he said. "Our only failures were girls who took inadequate doses at the wrong time — usually because they were already pregnant from intercourse a few days earlier."

Morris said the "morning after" technique had been used successfully to prevent pregnancy in 900 co-eds at UCLA, and in several other college health centres and in Europe.

"There is no question that it works," he said. "The question is how practical it is. It basically is a good back-up method for women who forget to take their pills or after accidents involving other contraceptive methods."

He said a 50-milligram dose of estrogen for three or four days after intercourse prevents implanting of the fertilized egg in the uterine wall, thus preventing pregnancy.

HIGHER DOSE

Morris said the technique works only during the five or six days between fertilization and implantation, but that higher dosages of estrogen are required by the fifth day and that there is less chance of preventing pregnancy.

Scientists Probe Fish School Sizes

By MARGARET BARNARD

HALIFAX (CP) — Research into fishing methods has led to the discovery that the size of the catch per fishing boat depends on encountering more schools of fish, not larger schools.

The research, undertaken by various groups in the Halifax-Dartmouth area, was described here Tuesday by Dr. L. M. Dickie to the annual conference of the Canadian Research Management Association.

Dr. Dickie, director of the marine ecology laboratory of the Bedford Institute of Technology, said the discovery may lead to a scientific method of increasing catches.

Scientists here hope to field-test their hypothesis, he said. If verified, it would be possible to start a pilot commercial-scale operation in about 18 months.

R. R. Hoge of Ottawa, engineer in charge of research and engineering for Computing Devices of Canada Ltd., suggested that the National Research Institute fo Canada compete with companies for the opportunity to perform "mission-oriented programs."

Mr. Hoge said he believes there is little connection between the technology currently being developed in government laboratories and what people need.

'CHOOSE ONE AREA'

He said in an interview he believed Canada should "work hard to beat the world in one particular area," such as transportation.

Premier G. I. Smith told the meeting that Nova Scotia wants to be involved in the formulation of any new national science policy.

The provinces' stake in science is proportionately just as great as that of Ottawa, he said.

Federal authorities have been working for some time to develop a national policy which would include a system of priorities for research and technological development.

Another conference speaker was Wilder Penfield, Jr., the only full-time employee of the Rideau Institute, a non-profit research centre near Newboro, Ont.

Mr. Penfield said he hoped the centre will break down the barriers between different disciplines and enable scientists to talk to one another in "basic English."

Chief Asks Death Penalty Clarification

REGINA (CP) — The president of the Association of Canadian Chiefs of Police said Tuesday there should be a clarification of government policy on the use of the death penalty.

Chief Arthur Cookson of Regina said "we're very concerned about the number of policemen that have been put to death this year. It's going to amount to this: Are we going to have abolition or not? If we're going to have total abolition, let them legislate it."

Cable Ten TV 'Educational'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Educational, informative and entertaining. That's how organizers are describing programs to be screened on Cable Ten, Vancouver's newest cable TV channel which opens Oct. 15.

Viewers in about 125,000 homes will be able to turn to the new TV outlet, operated by Fred Walsh's Cablevision System in co-operation with the Canadian Association for Adult Education.

Vancouver broadcaster Vic Waters comes out of semi-retirement to be the new channel's director.

Cable Ten will operate without commercials and will give away free television time to anyone, group or organization, if what they have to say is "relative to the community," says Mr. Waters.

A station here offering similar programs with a Victoria slant will begin operating in January, but Victoria Cablevision director H. L. Curran said plans were not yet final. The Victoria and Vancouver stations will operate independently of each other, but may exchange programs of mutual interest to both communities.

Set for Color Conversion

At first, Cable Ten will broadcast two hours from 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Gradually, programming will be increased beyond the six hours a day now offered by a similar operation in Montreal.

Cable Ten will be in black and white but is ready to convert to color in six months.

"It will be a new look in television," Mr. Waters said. "Nobody has ever told me what television is—and I've never been connected with production of a TV program — so I've no preconceived notions."

Mr. Waters said he sees no problem in filling air time but expects that the big job will be in deciding priorities—who gets on first and who gets on at all.

Simon Fraser University, the University of British Columbia and Vancouver secondary schools — all with their own media departments — will be given time.

Already lined up for prorams is the Vancouver art gallery. There will be a cooking show, and two programs a week by and about civic government.

Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell will appear on one show. Aldermen, especially committee chairmen, will use the other to explain what they are up to.

Cable Ten will be able to do shows away from its studio, now an unused corner of the new library at the British Columbia Institute of Technology.

Education, Information

Mr. Waters said he hopes to give BCIT students in TV "actual on-air experience." Cable Ten will pay for their services and will also give scholarships in communications.

The channel will also cover junior sports such as lacrosse and soccer in which cablevision already is involved. It will also cover music and other creative and artistic community events.

It will not go into news and other areas handled by other channels.

"We will always be an alternative," said Mr. Waters.

What is Cable Ten's operational budget for a year?

"About half of what a single Rowan and Martin Laugh-In hour costs," said Mr. Waters. He gave no figure.

"We don't care about ratings," Mr. Waters said. "We think there is a demand from intelligent viewers for educational TV and information about things affecting all of us in the community.

"We think that gradually more and more cablevision subscribers will turn to Cable Ten nightly to see, hear and participate in vital proramming they can't get anywhere eise.

"We realize we can't compete with Lucille Ball or Red Skelton —we don't intend to try.

"That would be plain silly."

Before the Judge

"She does not have more than 55 cents a day for food," Bay security officer Alexander Mortimer testified in provincial court Tuesday.

In the dock was Mary Archambault, 60, 1731 Cook, who pleaded guilty to stealing a dress from the Bay and food from a nearby grocery store.

In fairness to the accused, said Mortimer, he wanted to draw to the court's attention the plight of the accused.

"She told me she suffers from a heart condition and is a diabetic. She receives $90 from welfare of which $45 is for rent. She must also pay her hydro bill," said Mortimer.

Judge William Ostler remanded the accused to Oct. 17 for a pre-sentence report.

William M. Cosgrove, 20, formerly of St. Catherines, Ont., pleaded guilty to theft under $50 — stealing a transistor radio from a car parked on Douglas.

He was caught by lawyer Alan Donaldson and William Silverwood and held until police arrived court was told.

Judge Ostler said he was pleased to note Victorians still live up to their civic responsibilities and help police maintain law and order.

The accused was remanded to Oct. 15 for a pre-sentence report.

Pleading guilty to seven counts of drawing unemployment insurance benefits while employed, Raymond Coutu, 49, 1140 Government St., was remanded to Oct. 17 for sentence.

The court was told Coutu failed to declare any earnings for 14 weeks and received $405 in benefits.

"I don't think you had any criminal intent," said Judge Ostler to Henry S. Henderson, 23, 621 Seaford, who pleaded guilty to possessing an offensive weapon — two jacknives — and causing a disturbance in a downtown restaurant.

Police said Henderson was drunk and threatened to kill people in the cafe.

He was fined $75.

Pentagon Hopeful War Is for Birds

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — Would you believe that war is for the birds? So much so that hawks and doves might fight side by side or that parrots, ducks, chickens, pigeons and even mynah birds could be drafted to help defend the flag in some future war.

Whatever you might think of the scheme, the Pentagon is all for it. Consider the description of the $600,000 contract the defence department has with the psychology department of the University of Mississippi:

"This program is based," the contract reads, "on the supposition that birds will eventually replace humans for activities that are dangerous, difficult, expensive or boring." Among the activities the Pentagon has in mind are "aerial photography, gunnery, steering of missiles, detection of mines and search and destroy operations."

"Much of the research will relate to complex forms of stimulus control," the contract with the University of Mississippi reads, "for example, visual search, auditory pattern recognition, pursuit and tracking, controlled locomotion and operation of manipulanda while flying."

"This is not a development contract," explains a Pentagon spokesman. "What we're trying to do here is to see if birds can be trained to do certain things."

The pentagon admits it won't be able to use all birds in its research but it would like to train most species of wild birds for combat flying.

The use of warbirds is not a new one, though its past is hardly glorious.

The most serious attempt to use bird-like creatures was a program called X-ray, in which bats carrying incendiaries were to be flown into Tokyo during the Second Word War. The idea was to get the bats to roost in the eaves of Tokyo's wooden buildings, where the bombs would go off when the bats flipped upside down to sleep.

"The trouble with that one," said one scientist who worked on project X-ray, "was that it almost burned down an air force base in New Mexico." X-ray never made it to Japan.

The latest scheme for warbirds came to roost when the Pentagon circulated a letter advertising for ornithologists to work on it.

"I read it, I re-read it, and I read it again," one scientist said, "and I still couldn't believe it. It's insane."

Critics notwithstanding, the Pentagon is going ahead with its bird scheme.

"This program is just getting started," it says in describing it. "Hopefully, it will go on for 10 or 20 years."

The project is supported by a three-year "Project Themis" contract, at $200,000 a year. Project Themis is a program aimed at beefing up basic research in universities that have not had strong science programs.

Vandals Ruin Funland

There was no money on hand but thieves "threw game keys all around in an effort to break into the games and get the change."

PAPER FIRED

Packing cases and paper at the rear of the building were set on fire, he said, but passers-by noticed the activity around the buildings and alerted the fire department.

Edwards said 1,000 attended Funland's opening Saturday and the break-in will not interfere with business hours.

"It is just a sad commentary on the minority youth of today and no matter what you provide for them they just spoil it."

Murder in the Real Cathedral

CANTERBURY, England (CP) — Thomas A. Becket will be martyred all over again in Canterbury Cathedral next year when T. S. Eliot's famous verse play Murder in the Cathedral is staged for the first time in England's historic principal church.

The occasion will be one of a series of dramatic and religious events to mark the 800th anniversary of the killing of Archbishop Becket by four knights who believed King Henry II wanted him out of the way.

The stage for the play will be built in the centre of the 11th century cathedral, close to the site of the actual martyrdom on the altar steps. Negotiations now are taking place for a major theatrical star to play Becket. The production will be directed by E. Martin Browne, who directed the 1935 premiere in Canterbury's Chapter House.

The play will run for a three-week season in the autumn of 1970. During the summer, Canberbury's Marlowe Theatre will stage a new play by Australian dramatist Ray Lawler, entitled A Breach in the Wall. Already seen as a television production, it deals with the reactions of church and public to the supposed discovery of Thomas a Becket's tomb, which has been missing since Canterbury Cathedral was pillaged in the reign of Henry VIII.

Throughout the summer of 1970 there will also be a series of ecumenical pilgrimages and church services at Canterbury, including a Roman Catholic open-air mass in the precincts of the cathedral, celebrated by the Archbishop of Southwark.

The day of Becket's martyrdom, Dec. 29, will be marked by a festal evensong.

S.F. Gets Song

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — The city of San Francisco voted Monday to adopt an official song. You guessed it—I Left My Heart in San Francisco. Composer George Cory and lyricist Douglas Cross were present when the board of supervisors voted for the song, 11 to 0.

Tropicals Best for Apartments

By HILDA BEASTALL

Favorite plants for apartment dwellers seem to be tropicals from the forests and jungles of South America. Heat requirements for these plants are usually met easily enough, since most apartment blocks have a constant temperature level around 75 deg. F. for the winter months.

Hilda

This makes the choice of tropicals a good one if we remember to supply one other requirement.

When we think of tropical forests and jungles we should remember not only the heat but the humidity. The phrase "steaming jungle" occurs in every jungle story we've ever read, yet as we look at our tropical house plants shrivelling and dying in spite of our care we don't visualize their jungle surroundings.

Notice how thinly textured the leaves are of many of your tropicals. Dieffenbachia, fittonia, codiaeum, maranta, aphelandra and pilea are names found on labels when these potted house plants are purchased. They all lose their mositure rapidly when subjected to dry air.

It may seem strange that high light intensity is not important to them, nor do they need a constantly saturated soil. In fact, we find they will go for many days without soil watering if the air mosture is maintained at a high level.

The obvious question now comes: how to provide high humidity in the air for plants in an apartment without spoiling the rugs and other furnishings?

There is an answer, and each house plant lover will need to work out the fine details to suit conditions.

Watertight metal trays an inch or so deep with a surface area at least twice that of the total pot surface, provide an ideal humidifier for collections of small plants.

The trays are filled with small stones or granite chips and a water level maintained for half their depth so that the pots stand on the stones but not touching water.

The warm air temperature will cause water vapor to moisten the air around the plant leaves.

Tropicals in larger pots are better off when stood on pebbles in a wide shallow bowl and the water level kept just below the surface of the pebbles.

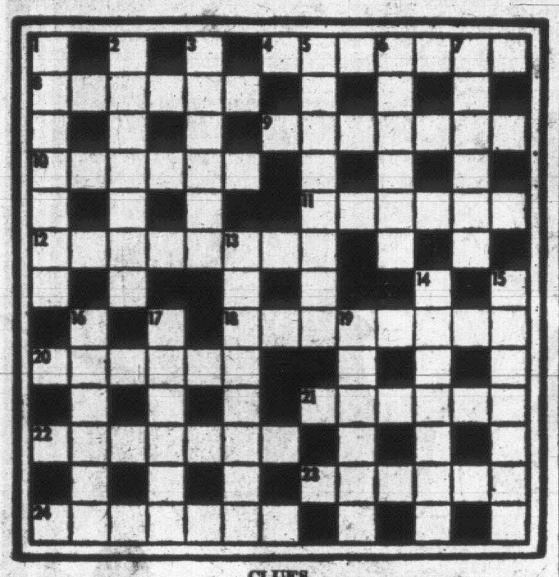

An ornamental feature of a large living room could well be collections of selected stones or rock pieces displayed in shallow watertight trays or bowls, acting as humidifiers to the benefit of plants and humans. Don't forget to water the stones!

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Speedy's Sinking Took All on Board

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1850 more than 9,000 miles of railway lines had been built in the U.S. but there were only 66 miles of track in British North America. One reason for the slowness in railway development was because Canada had good water transportation routes.

From the earliest days new settlers built their homes by the great rivers and then along the Great Lakes.

After the United Empire Loyalists settled in Upper Canada, commercial shipping routes developed among settlements along the shores of Lake Ontario and Lake Erie.

Even Royal Navy ships, known as "King's ships," often carried freight and passengers at commercial rates which were two guineas for first class accommodation between Kingston and Niagara.

The fare included sleeping berths, meals with wine, and was very reasonable as the voyage often lasted a week, depending on the weather.

One sloop "Sophia" actually made the trip in 18 hours.

Great Lakes voyages were often dangerous owing to sudden storms and families often divided so they would travel in two ships in case one went down. The same practice was followed when air travel began in modern times.

One of the worst disasters took place on Oct. 8, 1804, when the schooner "Speedy" sank off Presquile Point, Lake Ontario, while on a trip from York to Newcastle.

It was caught in a sudden snowstorm and everyone on board was drowned.

The Upper Canada Gazette reported one month later: "A more melancholy event has not occurred to this place for many years, nor does it often happen that such a number of persons of respectability are collected in the same vessel.

"Not less than nine widows, and we know not how many children, have to lament the loss of their husbands and fathers. It is somewhat remarkable that it is the third or fourth accident of a similar nature within these few years, the cause of which appears worthy of the attention and investigation of persons conversant in the art of shipbuilding."

Other events on Oct. 8:

Diagnostic X-Rays Need Not Be Feared

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I regret that many people have been frightened by alarming articles in lay magazines—articles that suggested that the dose of X-rays that people get when having teeth, chest, stomach or bowel X-rayed could injure their sex organs and thereby injure their unborn children. I happen to have known as friends most of the early workers with X-rays — men like Dr. Walter B. Cannon who, in the years following 1896 before the dangerous effects of the rays were known, were heavily exposed, and I can think of only a few who failed to live for many years, in spite of some skin burns.

Some suffered from little cancers which formed in the "burned" skin of their hands. Statistics have shown that these men had a little more tendency to a few diseases such as leukemia, than does the average man who never had an overdose of X-rays. I, who between 1910 and 1920 did much X-ray work and did not know enough to guard myself well against oft-repeated exposure, have enjoyed unusually good health.

Also, every year since 1926 I have had my chest, stomach, bowel and sometimes teeth, X-rayed, and I cannot see that these examinations have done me the slightest harm. A point which should now reassure those who are still afraid of X-rays is that recently, with the coming of much faster films, X-ray exposures have been greatly reduced. Thus, today the exposure required for making a film of teeth has been cut from several seconds to a fraction of a second.

A number of people, when told that the tiny dosage of X-rays needed for the making of a diagnostic film cannot possibly hurt anyone, have continued their efforts to frighten people by saying that such dosage will injure the person's children and grandchildren. Again, I see no sense to this claim.

I recently read a paper by Drs. Kato, Schull and Neel, able geneticists who have been studying children who were born to Japenese mothers who were given a huge dose of radiation during the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Previously, Drs. Schull and Neel studied the hundreds of mothers who had received this radiation, and they failed to find that it had done them permanent harm. Now the doctors are unable to find any sign of injury to the children who have been born to these mothers. This report should be very cheering to worriers about possible X-ray injury.

I should emphasize here that when mentioning X radiation, I have been talking about the small dosages of rays needed for diagnostic work; I have not been talking about the big doses that have to be given to cure a cancer.

It has been shown that, late in life, the incidence of leukemia is a little higher in the cases of persons treated with radiation than it is in the general population. But if I had a cancer needing treatment with X-rays or radium or cobalt rays, I would gladly accept any little late danger due to a scattered radiation.

Awhile ago, as I sat at luncheon with one of America's greatest atomic physicists, who is certainly competent to discuss this problem, he said that he had no patience with the recent excitement stirred up about the supposed dangers of a few dozen X-ray exposures in a lifetime. As he said, every day and all night, tremendously powerful cosmic rays, which come from outer space, keep streaming down through our homes and office buildings and through our bodies.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

For those who play bridge with regularity, repetitive situations arise that are quickly identified, and are handled with consummate ease. For the infrequent player, these same situations often become stumbling blocks, resulting in their being mishandled. One of these situations came up in the deal presented today.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

On West's opening club lead, East put up the queen, and South captured the trick with his king. It was rather apparent that three diamond tricks were needed to fulfil the contract, so declarer promptly led the jack of diamonds and finessed. Upon winning with his king, East returned his remaining club, and West gathered in four club tricks, to hand South a one-trick set.

Declarer "blew" his contract at trick one, when he captured East's queen of clubs. From South's point of view, he should have recognized that he could always win one club trick; and that if the adversely held clubs were divided 4-3, then no matter how South played the hand, he couldn't lose more than three club tricks and a diamond.

Declarer also should have perceived that he was going to take the diamond finesse in such a manner that if it lost, it would lose only to East. Hence, his objective should have been to prevent East from returning a club (if East possessed the diamond king.) If West had the diamond king, declarer would always fulfil his contract.

Based on the above reasoning, South should have permitted East's queen of clubs to win the opening lead. East would then return a club, and South would put up his jack. Whether West took this trick or not, was immaterial, for when East subsequently obtained the lead via the diamond king, he would have no club to play back.

Thus, played properly, declarer would have made 10 tricks: three spades, two hearts, four diamonds, and one club.

Caddy's Kiddy Spotted in Cadboro Bay?

Times Sea Serpent Reporter

The last reported sighting of Cadborosaurus (Caddy) — the sea serpent who periodically makes the rounds of our waters — was August 30, 1967, when he was seen with a convoy of three offspring off Saxe Point.

What looked like one of Caddy's offspring was spotted again today.

Mrs. W. S. Foster, 3773 Waring Place, was the first to see the sea serpent, frolicking around Cadboro Bay, 20 feet off shore.

This was at 8 a.m.

By 8:30 a.m. several of her neighbors were on watch too. They included Mrs. Frank Waring, 3761 Waring Place.

•

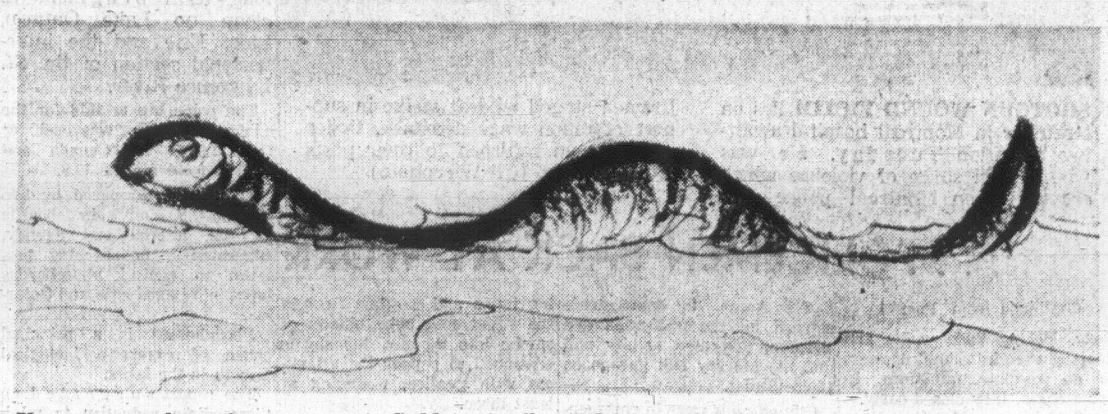

Frances Waring says she has lived at Cadboro Bay for 19 years and has never seen anything like this.

"It has to be Caddy's youngster. I've seen too many seals, ducks and other things on the water. He is definitely a sea serpent."

Joan Foster, who has only lived at Cadboro Bay since she came from Vancouver six weeks ago is relieved that she has witnesses to back up what she saw.

"I first saw him two weeks ago but I didn't say anything to anyone then. I thought people would think I was out of my tree!"

An artist, Mrs. Foster says she was just about ready to get down to some painting when she spotted the serpent this morning.

By th time photographer Bill Halkett and I arrived on the scene, the serpent — or whatever it was — sporting around about 2,000 feet offshore.

Ever since the Times of October, 1933, reported a sighting of Caddy by Major W. H. Langley, clerk of the Legislature of British Columbia, and Fred Kemp of the Provincial Archives, sighters of sea serpents have been subjected to derision by a skeptical society.

People, quite frankly, are inclined to believe they are short-sighted or "nuts," and quite frankly, I've been one of the skeptical.

But the creature we saw this morning was no figment of the imagination. A scoffing newsroom is convinced that our miniature Caddy is a log, trail of kelp, or seal.

Like Mrs. Foster, I'm relieved to have

company if I'm to join the ranks of Caddy believers.

The creature that romped, dived and swam along this morning was about five feet in length, a darkish green color, and had a round head that was lizard-like. When it dived it flipped its tail completely out of the water.

Mrs. Waring is convinced, along with Mrs. Foster, that the serpent is one of Caddy's kiddies. They've named him Fidele.

Dr. Clifford Carl of the Provincial Museum has little light to throw on the mystery.

Montreal Terrorized By Night of Violence

SHOOTING VICTIM AIDED by friends is one of Montreal casualties. The city erupted in violence Tuesday when policemen and firemen staged wildcat strike but they are back on the job today. (CP Wirephoto)

Army Stands Guard As Police Return

MONTREAL (CP)—City police and firemen were back at work today but the army continued to guard key locations, including police headquarters, and provincial police cruisers patrolled the streets.

At least two violent deaths occurred in the night when the mob ruled Montreal.

A burglar was shot to death while trying to loot a private dwelling in the west end. Police said Dr. Paul Fircks interrupted a man looting his house and opened fire. The intruder died of chest and stomach wounds.

Soldiers Guard Key Locations

Soldiers remained on guard at city hall, police headquarters, the courts and the television towers atop Mount Royal as city police and firemen returned to their posts.

The scars of mob violence marked the central area of the city following the one-day strike of police and firemen.

Rush-hour traffic began early, as the curious and the worried came in to survey the damage.

On St. Catherine Street between Peel and Bleury, unusually large crowds of people wandered around looking at the scores of damaged storefronts and the loot and trash dumped on to the city's shopping thoroughfare.

In Quebec City, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand called three Montreal officials, executive committee chairman Lucien Saulnier and the leaders of the police and firemen's brotherhoods, Guy Marcil and Andre Plante, to a meeting to ponder the consequences of the strike and the violence, and to pursue a settlement of the wage dispute that lay beneath it all.

Two provincial policemen were critically injured when a mob hauled them out of their car at Metcalfe and St. Catherine Streets and beat them up.

Reports of at least three bomb explosions came in during the night but police were unable to track them down.

Montreal police remained under control of provincial police under an emergency law invoked by the provincial government Tuesday. The measure is effective for 30 days.

Their walkout began at 8 a.m. Tuesday, when almost the entire morning shift left their posts, and was ended Tuesday night by emergency legislation passed by the Quebec national assembly. The special law ordered the strikers to return to work by one-minute past midnight.

Police and fire officials said normal operations were restored by 4 a.m.

Thieves Hit Ten Banks

At least 10 bank robberies and nearly a score of thefts in stores, offices and private homes were reported in a rash of criminal incidents during the period the city was without regular police protection.

As night fell, several hundred persons ran wild through Montreal streets, smashing windows with baseball bats, battering automobiles and police cruisers, looting stores whose front windows had been broken, shattering windows in downtown hotels and setting fire to the entrance of an airport limousine service.

The strike began shortly after 8 a.m. when the morning shift of the 3,700-man police force suddenly left their posts to attend a meeting in protest against wage proposals contained in an arbitration report.

They were joined later in the day by fellow officers until about 3,000 men were at the protest meeting in the east-end Paul Sauve Arena. Most of the city's 2,400 firemen, also involved in a wage dispute with the city, went on strike, leaving only a skeleton force on duty.

There were these developments during the hectic strike:

—The provincial government invoked an emergency law placing all police forces in the Montreal region, with its population of more than 2,000,000, under the command of the provincial police general director.

—About 800 provincial police officers were sent into Montreal to replace the 3,700 striking city policemen.

—Three bomb threats were made against city schools. All proved false. The same happened at the city's main post office, which was evacuated at the afternoon rush hour.

—Provincial police asked the public to limit calls to reports of serious accidents, injuries or crimes such as assault, robbery or rape.

—Banks took special precau-

Egypt Will Negotiate If 'Go-Between' Used

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt said today it would accept the so-called "Rhodes formula" for negotiating a peaceful settlement of the Middle East crisis.

A government spokesman said Egypt remains resolutely opposed to any direct talks with Israel. But in reply to questions he said Egypt does not feel a repetition of the 1949 negotiations on the Isle of Rhodes would constitute a direct negotiation with Israel.

In the 1949 talks, Arab and Israeli delegations spoke separately with United Nations mediator Ralph Bunche, who carried proposals and counter-proposals back and forth between the two sides. The talks resulted in the 1949 Holy Land armistice.

The Egyptian spokesman said it would be up to UN Secretary-General U Thant's special envoy for the Middle East, Gunnar Jarring, to decide whether such a method would be useful in his current search for a settlement.

The spokesman added Egypt would continue to insist that any settlement must be based on the UN Security Council resolution of Nov. 2, 1967.

Meanwhile, Israeli jet aircraft attacked two Arab guerrilla bases today near the northeast Jordan town of Irbid and returned safely, the Israeli military command said.

The raids, 22 miles inside the Jordanian border, were among the deepest penetrations of Jordan by Israeli planes since the 1967 war.

A Jordanian military spokesman said in Amman that the jets killed two civilians and wounded six with rocket and machine-gun fire.

Record Interest Rate to Prop Franc

PARIS (UPI) — The Bank of France today raised its discount rate — a key economic regulator — from 7 to a record 8 per cent, the highest in French history.

The move came as the cabinet approved a national budget calling for sharp cutbacks in public spending in a bid to prop up the shaky franc.

Government officials said they hoped the increase in the bank rate would be another major weapon in the fight against inflation threatening to undermine the 12.5 per cent devaluation of the franc on Aug. 8.

The last increase of the bank rate, which will have the effect of making credit more expensive, came June 13 in the middle of the presidential election following the resignation of Charles de Gaulle. Then it was raised from 6 to 7

Ruling Dooms Parity Hopes For Local Police Forces

Wage parity between Victoria city and Vancouver city policemen has been ruled out for the second time by the B.C. Mediation Commission.

While Saanich and Oak Bay police cases are yet to be heard by the commission, the decision for Victoria all but rules out any hope of parity for the suburban forces in this area with the mainland.

The commission's decision, announced today, reiterated its decision of last August. The review was requested by the Victoria City Policemen's Union and ordered by Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

The decision is final and binding, under a voluntary agreement between city police and the police commission prior to the dispute going to the mediation commission. There is no legal right to strike.

The Saanich and Oak Bay disputes were referred to the commission for a binding decision by the cabinet under the compulsory arbitration feature of the Mediation Commission Act (Bill 33). The commission will hear these cases later this month.

ARBITRATION INVOKED

The Victoria city police award was for a 14.55 per cent pay raise over two years. A first-class constable earned $620 a month before the raise.

Police union officials complained that the existing pay differential between the mainland and Greater Victoria — $24 a month for first-class constables — would widen to $48 a month considering the mediation commission's higher award for Vancouver city policemen.

Const. Kenneth Horsman, president of the Victoria City Policemen's Union, said this morning the union is disappointed at the decision.

The union felt the decisions were unfair and punitive. The commission wouldn't allow new evidence to be presented, he said.

He said the public should know that local police are

Brothers Asked To Spare a Reply

VANCOUVER — Resolutions that passed or failed at the school trustees' convention are useful mainly as a guage of their feelings on various issues.

Trustees admit they don't expect their proposals to be implemented by the government in legislation—not, at least, for a few years.

Delegates at the 65th annual convention decided Tuesday to ask Education Minister Donald Brothers to reply sooner to their proposals than has been his custom.

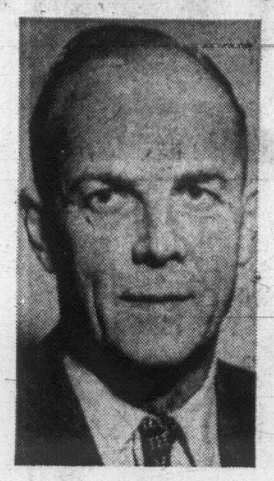

It usually takes a year to find out what the minister thinks of the ideas they thrash out on the convention floor, and Peter Bunn of the Greater Victoria board said it was "singularly insulting" to trustees' efforts.

Province to Protect Caves From Vandalism

McWILLIAMS
. . . to visit caves

Immediate steps will be taken to prevent vandalism and souvenir hunting in a spectacular cave near Port Alberni, a British Columbia government official said Tuesday.

Members of the Canadian Speleological Society have been keeping the location of the 4,000-foot cave secret pending a guarantee that the province would protect it from damage.

H. G. McWilliams, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said he would meet members of the society and provincial parks officials to work out details

McWilliams and parks director Bob Ahrens will also make a visit to the caves. Ahrens said the only thing standing in the way of creation of a park at the site was the legal status of the land.

The society, meanwhile, said has learned its members were not the first to find the cave, which they had named Casteret Cave, after famed French speleologist Norbert Casteret.

The society credited the discovery to Jim Johnson, a Nanaimo longshoreman. He found it in 1964, sealed off an entrance to protect it and kept its existence a secret.

He named it Euclataws Caye, after a Vancouver Island Indian tribe. The speleological society said it has accepted this name and the government is expected to do likewise

TRIO FACE TRIAL FOR BRAWL

CROFTON — Three Crofton youths charged with causing bodily warm and intent to wound four Greek sailors here Aug. 16 pleaded not guilty in court this week and were released on bail.

They will be tried in Nanaimo assize court in November. No exact date has been set.

Roy Deslaurier, 18, is also charged with possession of an offensive weapon and was released on a $3,000 bail for both charges.

Robert Little and Kenneth Rudsvick, both 20, were released on $2,500 bail each.

Hearing Set In Hunting Fatality

CAMPBELL RIVER — Andrew Howard High, 22, of Nanaimo, charged with manslaughter in the hunting death of his brother, has been released on $2,000 bail.

Roger John High, 23, also of Nanaimo, died from a gunshot wound Sept. 12 when hunting near Campbell River.

Nanaimo Opening For B.C. Bank

NANAIMO (CP) — A branch of the Bank of British Columbia will be officially opened here Thursday bringing the number of its branches in B.C. to eight.

A meeting of bank directors will be held Thursday morning in the office of Mayor Frank Ney, with a report from Nanaimo branch manager Wayne W. Allen.

IWA Chastized On Vote Apathy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the International Woodworkers of America were chastized Tuesday for an apparent lack of concern about their role in politics.

A report by IWA officers to the Western Canadian Region annual convention said John Squire, an officer of the Port Alberni local and New Democratic Party candidate in the Alberni riding, lost in the Aug. 27 provincial election because he did not get the support of trade unionists and their wives.

"If he had, we would have won and the same may be said of other candidates," the report said.

"While it is too early to make any precise analysis of the election throughout the province, we must now realize that there exists in this province a widespread prejudice against trade union political activity and that that prejudice extends into the rank and file of the trade union movement."

The report said that while it appears to be acceptable for business and professional interests to support their chosen parties financially and otherwise, it is generally held that "there is something sinister about trade unionists having a political view and sponsoring it.

"During an election campaign, hardly a day goes by without an editorial that notes with shock that a union leader or rank-and-filer has dared to take a political view and the legal and peaceful steps to advance that view," it said.

LABOR SAID DEAD

Al Hartung of Portland, Ore., former international president of the IWA, said that the union in both Canada and the United States is not "carrying out its responsibility at the ballot box."

Mr. Hartung said that of the 100 members of the U.S. Senate, 55 are multi-millionaires and added that he thinks labor is not only dead, but "has already buried itself."

"Don't neglect political activity," he said. "Get down to it and get some people into the party you want and you think should belong in it."

Earlier, Grace MacInnis, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Vancouver Kingsway, told IWA members that if labor wants to win its own battles, it must look for allies among welfare recipients, old-age pensioners and low income wage earners.

Malaspina Pupils Name Council

The new council has said one of its priorities will be to obatin space for a student lounge at the college.

QUAIFE
. . . expects race

Quaife Will Seek Another Mandate

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife and two or three aldermen up for re-election in December have indicated they will run again.

Ald. R. H. Benzies, who is in hospital, has not yet announced whether he will run.

But Quaife, 34, who completes his first two-year term, said he expects a couple of opponents for the mayor's seat though there have been no public announcements.

Four-year veteran Ald. Tom Kilpatrick will contest his seat and Ald. Roy Harder will attempt to get support for his second term as alderman.

"It is sort of interesting to run after just one term. It's a good indication of whether the people are happy with what you have done," said Harder.

Quaife won against two opponents two years ago after 12-year veteran Jack Dobson stepped down.

SCHOOL THEFTS NET JAIL TERM

NANAIMO—A 21-month term in Oakalla for theft over $50 was given Tuesday to a former Nanaimo accounts supervisor.

Eward Frederick Bealle, 35, of Nanaimo was found guilty of conversion of more than $25,000 in school funds, the thefts occuring between Oct. 20, 1966, and July 21, 1969.

A police witness told court that Bealle said he was a compulsive gambler, especially on poker and horses. The thefts began when he cashed a $577 petty cash cheque, spent the money, later covering the theft by putting his own money back into the accounts.

Clarke testified that investigation showed the thefts had been almost monthly, some times twice a month.

Bealle said he went to Nanaimo four years ago after conquering a drinking problem. "I tried to be too good too fast."

Judge Eric Winch, before sentencing Bealle said, "We demand and we expect of our public servants—trust. This is a breach of trust."

DUNCAN MAY LOSE TELEGRAPH

DUNCAN — The Canadian Pacific Railway is considering moving telegraph and dispatch services out of Duncan station to Nanaimo, Mayor Jim Quaife said Tuesday.

The move is one step in a CPR plan to eventually close down the old station in the middle of Duncan.

Quaife said passenger service will continue but the downtown station isn't vital to this service. He said arrangements would be made with the CPR to shelter train passengers in another building.

Quaife has been in touch with CPR officails in Vancouver for months but no deadlines for transfer or services has been mentioned, he said.

Trustees Favor Bible in Class

Peter Powell, vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, told delegates at the trustees' annual convention here, he was proud of the way they handled themselves during debate on a resolution that could have turned the convention floor into chaos.

Results of the vote on the Vancouver-sponsored resolution to delete the requirement for religious exercises from the Public Schools Act was 190 against, 108 in favor.

Trustee Fritz Bowers of the Vancouver board said the proposal was not anti-religious, but was put forward because religion exercises represent a "disservice" to children and religious people.

'SHAM' LABEL

"If you ask teachers and students how it works out, it turns out it's just a sham," Bowers said.

He said the majority of religious leaders in Vancouver supported abolition of the Lord's Prayer and Bible readings from schools when it was proposed earlier this year by the Vancouver board.

Commented a trustee from the Okanagan: "We've managed to get the state out of our bedrooms, and it's about time we got the church out of our schools."

Mrs. Isabel Reader of the Sooke board told delegates they were of a "bunch of hyprocites" for paying lip-service only to Christian values, and added she wanted to see religious exercises thrown out.

ONLY SOLUTION

Saanich Peninsula trustee Jack Armstrong said he favors exposing school children to religious exercises because Christianity is the "only effective solution for living, which has existed for 2,000 years.

"If this is good enough for us, why is it not good enough for our children?"

Fraser Canyon trustee Ed Barry said when he was a juvenile court judge he had observed that only two per cent of young people charged in court had attended church or Sunday school as children, which he interpreted as evidence of the redemptive value of exposure to religious practices.

H. A. J. Monk, from Coquitlam, said classroom Bible readings are the only chance many children have to hear it and said "moral law" contained in the Bible is the source of "moral fibre."

They also passed a proposal urging the minister of education to assess the impact of religious observances on students.

SHOTGUN WOUND VICTIM lies on stretcher in Montreal hospital awaiting attention Tuesday. He was wounded in surge of violence which erupted when Montreal police and firemen staged wildcat strike in support of union wage demands. Police and firemen returned to their posts late Tuesday. (CP Wirephoto)

tions, locking their vaults and keeping cash in tellers' drawers to an absolute minimum. In some cases, they closed early.

—Hospitals used private ambulance services to replace police ambulances, which normally handle most of the emergency transportation of sick and injured persons.

LED TO DEATH

—Militant taxi drivers organized a demonstration against Murray Hill Limousine Service Ltd., a long-standing rival, which led to the shooting-death of a provincial police officer and several injuries, the burning of the bus company's headquarters and extensive damage to the city's downtown area. The limousine service has exclusive pickup rights at Montreal International Airport.

—Justice Minister Remi Paul asked the federal government for army and RCMP assistance to keep order, if necessary. From their Valcartier base near Quebec City 120 troops of the Royal 22nd Regiment were brought to St. Hubert, south of Montreal, and placed on standby alert.

Taxi radios were used to rally about 200 taxi drivers for a horn-honking motorcade which took them first to the Paul Sauve Arena, to demonstrate support for the policemen and firemen, and then to city hall and the Murray Hill garage on Barre Street.

City officials were in emergency meetings most of the day at city hall, but Mayor Jean Drapeau was not there until after 9:30 p.m. when he made a quick flight from St. Louis, Mo., where he addressed a trade promotion fair.

At the Murray Hill garage, in a run-down part of the city's lower west-end, demonstrators hurled stones through the windows of the two-storey building and set gasoline fires until they were driven back by shots from the darkened upper storey.

ENRAGED THE CROWD

The shots enraged the crowd, which had been re-inforced by several hundred supporters and thrill-seekers.

While some demonstrators continued to hurl stones at the building, others left the scene and returned with containers of gasoline to make Molotov cocktails.

Between volleys from the sniper inside the building, the demonstrators hurled gasoline bombs at buses parked outside and at the two large doors of the garage.

As the flames from the burning buses and gasoline fires in the street sent huge billows of smoke into the air, the sniper continued to pepper the attackers with gunfire, wounding at least three.

Then two men appeared with high-powered hunting rifles. One methodically shot out the bulbs in four large spotlights on the front of the building, the other climbed to the roof of a building across the street and returned the sniper's fire.

FORCE DOORS OPEN

As nearby residents swigged soft drinks and children darted about, a small group succeeded in breaking through the building's front doors.

A half-dozen firemen struggled to extinguish the burning buses outside, but the demonstrators set fires and smashed property inside the garage. Huge black clouds of smoke rose through drizzling rain as the demonstrators shouted and cheered.

Photographers who attempted to take pictures of the events had their cameras taken from them and smashed to prevent later identification of demonstrators.

The attack on Murray Hill did not end until more than three hours after it began, when about 20 helmeted provincial police officers arrived.

Meanwhile, in Quebec City, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said it was the first time in his 22 years in politics that he had experienced such a situation. He said the strike was "excessively dangerous."

Policemen "charged with enforcing the law" were "denying the law and defying the law."

BILL PASSES QUICKLY

The government bill ordering strikers to return to work or face fines and possible imprisonment was given three swift readings by the national assembly and signed by the lieutenant-governor in the presence of Premier Bertrand, Opposition Leader Jean Lesage and Speaker Gerard Lebel.

But although the strike was coming to an end, the rampage that accompanied it was far from over.

The demonstrating taxi drivers had given way to young members of left-wing and separatist political groups who participate in almost every major demonstration in the city, ready to attack symbols of "capitalism" and "les Anglais—the English."

The youths smashed windows in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel and the International Business Machine building across Dorchester Blvd., then swept west to the Windsor Hotel, site of Mayor Drapeau's posh restaurant Le Vaisseau d'Or—The Golden Vessel.

HURL GARBAGE CANS

Chanting separatist slogans and cheering the crash of broken glass, they hurled garbage cans and pieces of wood through the windows of the restaurant, before rushing on to St. Catherine St., the city's main shopping thoroughfare.

They smashed the windows of banks and stores, stopping occasionally to pluck a piece of merchandise out of a store display, upended potted trees and overturned garbage cans, strewing trash into the street.

Their next target was the Murray Hill offices in the Sheraton Mount Royal Hotel on Peel St., which received the same treatment as other offices and stores along the route.

The mob then moved up Metcalfe St. to McGill University, scene of a protest last March 28 calling for its conversion into a French-language institution.

They stormed onto the campus, wrecking a security guard's booth and smashing windows in several buildings before reaching the university administration building where they broke windows and shattered two glass doors.

By midnight, about five hours after the Murray Hill demonstration began, provincial police were restoring order with the co-operation of the Montreal officers returning to work.

Chemical Limitation For Lakes

OTTAWA (CP) — The International Joint Commission today released a report recommending a long-term program to clean up Lake Ontario, Lake Erie and the international section of the St. Lawrence River.

The price tag to 1978 for the cleanup job was set at $1,001,000,000 for Canada and $7,318,000,000 for the U.S.

The report, prepared by two Canada-U.S. advisory boards for the international agency, suggested a far-reaching program to control phosphorous input into Lakes Erie and Ontario.

The report suggested an "immediate reduction to minimum practical levels" of the phosphorous contents of household and other detergents which pollute the lakes.

Phosphorous compounds in detergents ought to be eliminated entirely not later than 1972.

Other principal recommendations:

—Formation of an international contingency plan to clean up pollution promptly following incidents such as accidental oil discharge.

—Development by Ontario, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan of regulations by 1970 to prevent pollution from oil and gas exportation and production.

—Implementation by 1970 of legislation to control pollution caused by all classes of boats and vessels.

—Implementation by 1972 of co-ordinated programs to control pollution from herbicides and pesticides.

The report said the two lakes studied and the international portion of the river are being polluted on both sides of the boundary to an extent that is causing, and is likely to cause, injury to health and property on both sides.

Nutrients, particularly phosphorous, are going into the waters in such quantities that Lake Erie, particularly the western basin, "is in an advanced state of eutrophication."

Accelerating eutrophication is occurring in Lake Ontario with the effects being carried into the St. Lawrence River, which drains the lake.

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN

CHICAGO (WP) —A jittery Chicago awaits four days of demonstrations and rallies by the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), a faction-ridden radical organization that has chosen the ambiguous slogan, "Bring the war home."

The scenario sketched by SDS spokesmen and literature call for four days of marches, park rallies, organizing actions in high schools, and one project described in a handbill as a women's drive to "destroy" a draft induction centre.

Student members from as far away as Harvard and west coast colleges were reportedly coming to the city and one SDS spokesman has predicted that 5,000 would show up. They will be housed at widely scattered locations in Chicago.

The tension rose considerably after someone late Monday night planted a bomb that blew apart a statue of a 19th century policeman commemorating the Haymarket riot of 1886.

Police were questioning two men who may have seen the bomber, but authorities otherwise indicated they did not know who had planted the explosive.

The statue was blown from the pedestal and the blast shattered windows in nearby buildings.

'WAR' DECLARED

The leader of the Chicago Police Sergeants' Association, an official organization, placed the blame on SDS, calling the explosion a "declaration of war" between the student group and policemen.

"We now feel that it is 'kill or be killed,'" said Sergeant Richard Barrett, "regardless of the Jay Millers, the Daniel Walkers and the so-called Civil Rights Act." Jay Miller is director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Illinois. Daniel Walker is the Chicago attorney who headed a panel which described the 1968 Democratic National Convention disorders as a "police riot."

However, police superintendent James B. Conlisk called Barrett's statement "completely inaccurate" and said "there is no indication that any organization was responsible for the bombing."

VIOLENCE RUMORED

Mayor Richard Daley called the bombing "an attack on all the citizens of Chicago" but did not blame any person or organization.

The explosion added fuel to rumors already swirling here that, in addition to staging public demonstrations, the radical student groups might set off isolated acts of violence.

The only SDS official willing to comment was Jonathan Lerner, the assistant national secretary, who said of the explosion, "we didn't have anything to do with it." Of the Chicago Police Association's statement, Lerner said "The Chicago pigs have now openly declared war on SDS."

Lerner emerged from the national SDS headquarters in a shabby west side building Tuesday afternoon to read a statement for television cameras and then returned inside without answering questions. He called police "pig agents of the murderes who run this country which has long been at war with the black and brown people of the world."

While nothing like a consistent pattern emerged from Tuesday's voting, trustees seem to be striving to reassert their local authority without going out of their way to criticize the government education finance formula, which many consider the heaviest shackle on their fiscal autonomy.

They registered opposition to the principle of submission of operating budgets to referendum, but rejected a proposal to have the finance formula examined by a royal commission.

They also rejected a Greater Victoria proposal to finance education out of general revenue rather than through property taxes, but the idea got three times as many votes as it did two years ago.

SURPRISED

To the surprise of many, a resolution urging the government to take over the entire cost of financing regional colleges was defeated.

Under a current agreement, school boards and the government share the cost of operating colleges on a 50-50 basis.

Delegates reacted strongly against a Greater Victoria proposal to have teacher salaries negotiated on a province-wide basis for a two-year period by representatives of the B.C. Teachers Federation and the trustees association.

Wallace Set As Delegate

Deputy provincial secretary L. J. Wallace has been named to the Canadian delegation to the Colombo plan conference opening here Oct. 14.

He will be the first member of a Canadian official delegation to a Colombo Plan conference to be named from outside the federal public service.

The appointment, by Premier Bennett at the request of Prime Minster Trudeau, was announced Tuesday by John Hadwen, secretary general for the conference.

Wallace will head the Canadian delegation on the Colombo Plan committee for technical co-operation, Hadwen said.

He added that Wallace will be a valuable member of the delegation because of his experience and special knowledge of pre-conference preparations.

Unwilling to be initiated as a Caddy-believer I checked with Carl to try and get some identification.

Wanting to appear objective, I suggested it could be a wolf eel. "Not likely," said Carl, "wolf eels don't swim along the surface."

He ruled ou the seal theory because of the color.

"It probably was a sea elephant. But it's hard to tell from the description."

Joan Foster sketched our mystery creature's likeness. I agree that it tallies with what I saw through the binoculars.

Had it been closer he might have been in line for the $300 award the Times has offered for an authentic photograph of Caddy.

Maybe it's just as well. I would have looked like an "inside job" anyway.

entitled to receive what others are enjoying. Local police don't make enough money to qualify for a National Housing Act house mortgage, but Vancouver area policemen do, he said.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen, speaking as chairman of the city police commission, said the union's disappointment is "quite understandable."

But, he added, it was the police commission which agreed to the police union request that both sides agree to be bound by the mediation commission's decision.

"I can't think the decision was punitive," he said. "The increase compounds to just over 15 per cent."

Stephen said Victoria isn't Vancouver and, without denigrating the local force — "the grandest force in Canada" — he didn't think that economically this area should be asked to support the same wages as Vancouver.

There was also "some justification" in saying that police work is more onerous in Vancouver.

After Title What's to Say?

Dr. Harold D. Bibb, post doctoral fellow with the University of Victoria biology department, will lecture on the status of frogs Thursday 4:30 p.m. in the Elliott Building on campus.

Bibb will speak on "roles of cellular proliferation, growth and degeneration in production and maintenance of ganglionic hypertrophy in Rana pipiens."

Bibb is on a study grant, sponsored by the U.S. government, and is doing research for a year with the Uvic biology department after receiving his doctorate from the University of Iowa.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cloud and showers prevailed along the coast overnight behind the system which moved through the south coast Tuesday evening. Rain is still associated with this disturbance as it moves through the interior. A number of thunderstorms were also reported in coastal areas overnight. Some clearing is expected tonight while rain from the next major Pacific system reaches the north coast Thursday afternoon. Temperatures will remain generally a little below normal.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

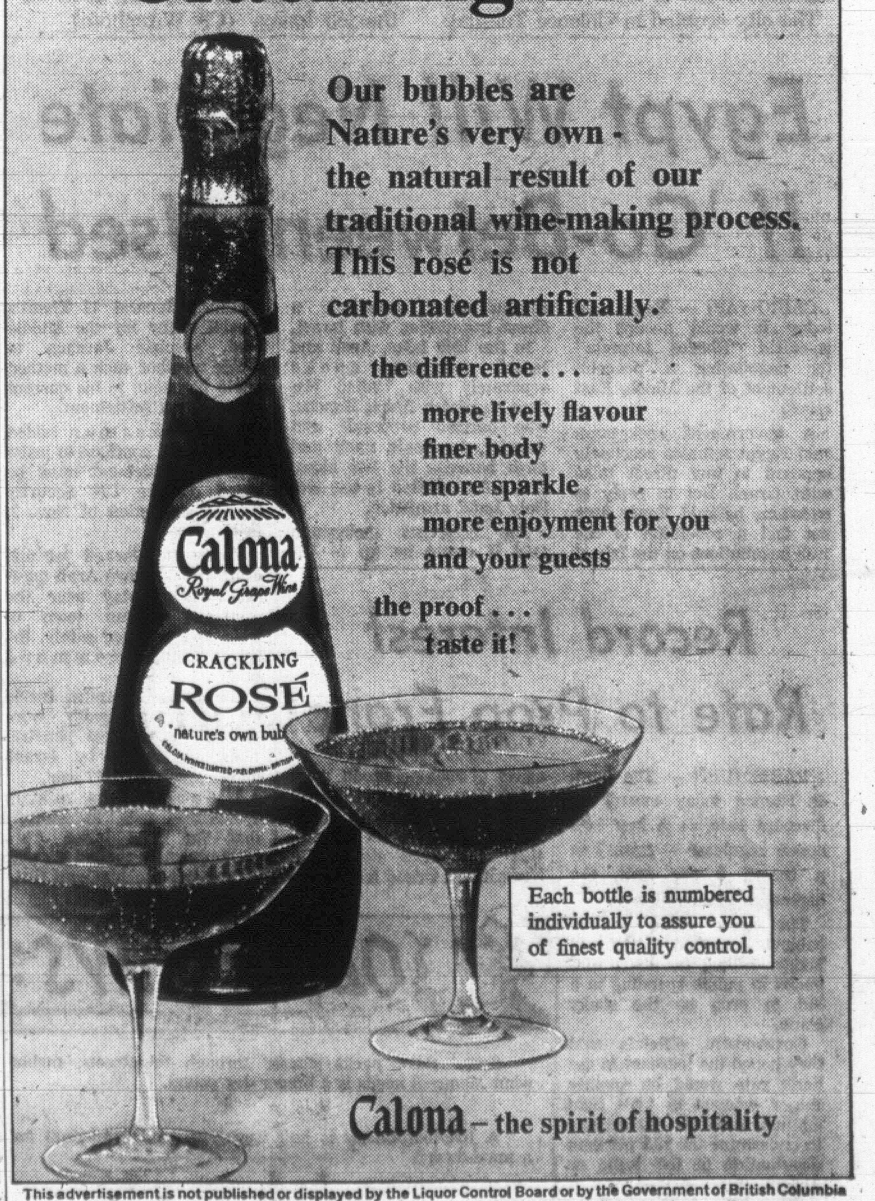

There probably weren't so many surgeons flying off to Europe and Australia this summer. Information from hospitals indicates that the medical men who preside in the operating room were just as busy at home, if not more so, this summer than ever before.

A quarter-century and more ago, people who needed surgery put it off 'till cool weather, if they could. Most operations, therefore, took place in the fall and winter, and surgeons had nothing much to do in the summer. So they vacationed.

Air conditioning now takes the heat out of the operating room and patients don't perspire so heavily under casts and bandages. And now, in summer, surgeons know how to replace salt and water in appropriate amounts when patients are under great stress after operations. The rate of mortality from summer surgery is much lower.

Province to Protect Caves From Vandalism

McWILLIAMS
. . . to visit caves

Immediate steps will be taken to prevent vandalism and souvenir hunting in a spectacular cave near Port Alberni, a British Columbia government official said Tuesday.

Members of the Canadian Speleological Society have been keeping the location of the 4,000-foot cave secret pending a guarantee that the province would protect it from damage.

H. G. McWilliams, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said he would meet members of the society and provincial parks officials to work out details

McWilliams and parks director Bob Ahrens will also make a visit to the caves. Ahrens said the only thing standing in the way of creation of a park at the site was the legal status of the land.

The society, meanwhile, said has learned its members were not the first to find the cave, which they had named Casteret Cave, after famed French speleologist Norbert Casteret.

The society credited the discovery to Jim Johnson, a Nanaimo longshoreman. He found it in 1964, sealed off an entrance to protect it and kept its existence a secret.

He named it Euclataws Cave, after a Vancouver Island Indian tribe. The speleological society said it has accepted this name and the government is expected to do likewise

TRIO FACE TRIAL FOR BRAWL

CROFTON — Three Crofton youths charged with causing bodily warm and intent to wound four Greek sailors here Aug. 16 pleaded not guilty in court this week and were released on bail.

They will be tried in Nanaimo assize court in November. No exact date has been set.

Roy Deslaurier, 18, is also charged with possession of an offensive weapon and was released on a $3,000 bail for both charges.

Robert Little and Kenneth Rudsvick, both 20, were released on $2,500 bail each.

Hearing Set In Hunting Fatality

CAMPBELL RIVER — Andrew Howard High, 22, of Nanaimo, charged with manslaughter in the hunting death of his brother, has been released on $2,000 bail.

Roger John High, 23, also of Nanaimo, died from a gunshot wound Sept. 12 when hunting near Campbell River.

Nanaimo Opening For B.C. Bank

NANAIMO (CP) — A branch of the Bank of British Columbia will be officially opened here Thursday bringing the number of its branches in B.C. to eight.

A meeting of bank directors will be held Thursday morning in the office of Mayor Frank Ney, with a report from Nanaimo branch manager Wayne W. Allen.

IWA Chastized On Vote Apathy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the International Woodworkers of America were chastized Tuesday for an apparent lack of concern about their role in politics.

A report by IWA officers to the Western Canadian Region annual convention said John Squire, an officer of the Port Alberni local and New Democratic Party candidate in the Alberni riding, lost in the Aug. 27 provincial election because he did not get the support of trade unionists and their wives.

"If he had, we would have won and the same may be said of other candidates," the report said.

"While it is too early to make any precise analysis of the election throughout the province, we must now realize that there exists in this province a widespread prejudice against trade union political activity and that that prejudice extends into the rank and file of the trade union movement."

The report said that while it appears to be acceptable for business and professional interests to support their chosen parties financially and otherwise, it is generally held that "there is something sinister about trade unionists having a political view and sponsoring it.

"During an election campaign, hardly a day goes by without an editorial that notes with shock that a union leader or rank-and-filer has dared to take a political view and the legal and peaceful steps to advance that view," it said.

LABOR SAID DEAD

Al Hartung of Portland, Ore., former international president of the IWA, said that the union in both Canada and the United States is not "carrying out its responsibility at the ballot box."

Mr. Hartung said that of the 100 members of the U.S. Senate, 55 are multi-millionaires and added that he thinks labor is not only dead, but "has already buried itself."

"Don't neglect political activity," he said. "Get down to it and get some people into the party you want and you think should belong in it."

Earlier, Grace MacInnis, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Vancouver Kingsway, told IWA members that if labor wants to win its own battles, it must look for allies among welfare recipients, old-age pensioners and low income wage earners.

Malaspina Pupils Name Council

The new council has said one of its priorities will be to obatin space for a student lounge at the college.

QUAIFE
. . . expects race

Quaife Will Seek Another Mandate

DUNCAN — Mayor Jim Quaife and two or three aldermen up for re-election in December have indicated they will run again.

Ald. R. H. Benzies, who is in hospital, has not yet announced whether he will run.

But Quaife, 34, who completes his first two-year term, said he expects a couple of opponents for the mayor's seat though there have been no public announcements.

Four-year veteran Ald. Tom Kilpatrick will contest his seat and Ald. Roy Harder will attempt to get support for his second term as alderman.

"It is sort of interesting to run after just one term. It's a good indication of whether the people are happy with what you have done," said Harder.

Quaife won against two opponents two years ago after 12-year veteran Jack Dobson stepped down.

DUNCAN MAY LOSE TELEGRAPH

DUNCAN — The Canadian Pacific Railway is considering moving telegraph and dispatch services out of Duncan station to Nanaimo, Mayor Jim Quaife said Tuesday.

The move is one step in a CPR plan to eventually close down the old station in the middle of Duncan.

Quaife said passenger service will continue but the downtown station isn't vital to this service. He said arrangements would be made with the CPR to shelter train passengers in another building.

Quaife has been in touch with CPR officails in Vancouver for months but no deadlines for transfer or services has been mentioned, he said.

SCHOOL THEFTS NET JAIL TERM

NANAIMO—A 21-month term in Oakalla for theft over $50 was given Tuesday to a former Nanaimo accounts supervisor.

Eward Frederick Bealle, 35, of Nanaimo was found guilty of conversion of more than $25,000 in school funds, the thefts occuring between Oct. 20, 1966, and July 21, 1969.

A police witness told court that Bealle said he was a compulsive gambler, especially on poker and horses. The thefts began when he cashed a $577 petty cash cheque, spent the money, later covering the theft by putting his own money back into the accounts.

Clarke testified that investigation showed the thefts had been almost monthly, some times twice a month.

Bealle said he went to Nanaimo four years ago after conquering a drinking problem. "I tried to be too good too fast."

Judge Eric Winch, before sentencing Bealle said, "We demand and we expect of our public servants—trust. This is a breach of trust."

—Times photos by Bill Halkett.

WARING PLACE WAS ON WATCH this morning when a descendant of Caddy, the sea serpent, who was first seen at Cadboro Bay, returned to the scene of its parent's first frolickings. Diving, swimming and playing around a small sailboat moored offshore, the creature kept residents glued to their binoculars for more than an hour before it headed out to sea. The first to spot the creature was Mrs. W. S. Foster (right), followed by Mrs. Frank Waring. When Times photographer Bill Halkett appeared on the scene the creature had moved out too far to take a positive identifying picture.

Jubilee Desperate, Eyes Idle Laundry

By JIM HUME

Royal Jubilee Hospital's laundry plant can hang on for another year, maybe two, if the baling wire and the maintenance crews hold out.

But, says administratot Dr. A. C. Pickles, the creaking plant is strictly a "week-to-week operation" with maximum effort required to keep it going at required capacity.

And it won't have any of its own linen to wash until, at the earliest, the summer of 1971.

Provincial government officials in the department of mental health say they can't see the Glendale laundry going into operation until the hospital is completed and the 300-bed institution in full use.

Officials in the department of public works say the laundry is almost fully equipped and could be in operation by year-end.

If the confusion and crossed signals surprises the layman, it doesn't surprise the Regional Hospital Districts special committee, struck several months ago, charged with the task of find a site, costs and the efficiency of a central laundry operation to serve all hospitals in the area.

After months of research and inquiries ranging from Pittsburgh to Los Angeles, the committee, three weeks ago, was ready to report its findings.

Committee members were consternated when they were asked why they were looking for a new central laundry plant when a laundry capable of handling linen and supplies for 1,000 beds was approaching completion at Glendale.

FIRST KNOWLEDGE

Committee members claim the suggestion was the first knowledge they had of the new facility although a representative of the provincial government sits on the committee.

They now hope to have their report in the hands of the Regional Hospital District's advisory committee on hospital problems next Wednesday.

It will suggest that plans for one central laundry be scrapped and that Glendale, and the relatively new plant at St. Joseph's Hospital, handle the washing for all area hospitals.

That suggestion will not end, but could well add to, the confusion surrounding Glendale since Public Works Minister W. N. Chant turned the first sod five days before the 1966 provincial election.

At the time he said Glendale should be completed within a year "or maybe a little longer."

Glendale was started as a "school for retarded children."

It was still a "school" in December, 1967, when the Times published a photograph of the new laundry and boiler plant under construction.

They would like to use the new laundry facility which, with St. Joseph's laundry, could end washing and ironing problems for some years. But they don't want to be saddled with the responsibility of a hospital obviously designed to serve the entire province. And they fear that if they get their feet in the laundry door they might finish up with the entire hospital.

Dr. Gordon Tucker, deputy minister of mental health, says there is no danger of that happening.

"Glendale is too much of a province-wide facility for that to happen," he said.

At the same time he admits that once completed a public society will be formed to run the hospital — and indication that already the provincial government is eyeying the possibility of unloading Glendale on the Regional District.

The government has already set a precedent in the field.

The Eric Martin Institute was built as a provincial facility.

It finished up under the administrative jurisdiction of Jubilee and the over all jurisdiction of the Regional Hospital District. The switch cost local taxpayers $60,000 for operating capital and makes them responsible for capital costs should expansion be required or new equipment be needed.

Quick Care Unit Approved

St. Jospeh's Hospital has received provincial government approval to proceed with plans for a one-storey ambulatory care unit costing an estimated $287,000.

The proposed unit, for day care surgery and other ambulatory programs, is expected to reduce the number of admissions to active treatment beds, thereby increasing the number of beds available to acuetly ill patients, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said.

The building, to be of concrete block construction and containing an estimated $85,000 worth of equipment, will be built adjacent to the existing emergency depratment.

Approval is subject to concurrence of the Capital Region Hospital District.

Donald Cox, deputy minister of hospital insurance, said the ambulatory care unit would contain space for 18 recovery beds, two operating rooms, two treatment rooms and five treatment cubicles.

Also approved Tuesday were renovations to St. Joseph's totalling $9,746.

First Patients Set for Dec. 1

The Eric Martin Institute will receive its first patients Dec. 1

But, warned administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles, that does not mean the hospital will be swinging into full operation on that date.

It will be the initial operation of transferring patients from the Bay Pavilion to the new facility," he said. "It can only be regarded as phase one of bringing the EMI into operation."

The Bay Pavilion can handle 50 patients.

With the transfer of patients, staff and equipment the Pavilion will be freed to provide 50 more acute care beds for the main hospital.

The Institute, completed in February, will eventually provide services for 170 mentally ill patients.

But he did state that he anticipated no major problems in filling staff requirements.

"To date we have 900 applications for positions in the Institute," he said. "That would indicate that there is no shortage of people to fill the many positions available."

PELLET GUNS NEED LICENCE

Strict regulations governing the use of pellet guns are now in effect throughout British Columbia.

Police warned today that pellet guns, like revolvers, are classified as restricted weapons under a new section of the Criminal Code which came into effect Oct. 1.

This means an owner must obtain a permit to use or possess a pellet gun outside his own home or business premises.

If he fails to do this, he is liable to two years' imprisonment.

The growing use of pellet guns, especially by juveniles, is causing concern to law enforcement officers.

Premier to Open Colombo Meet

Premier Bennett will officially open the annual Colombo Plan conference in Victoria Oct. 20, it was announced today.

John Hawden, secretary-general of the conference, said Bennett accepted an invitation from Prime Minister Trudeau to open the talks.

Working sessions of the conference start Oct. 14 and end Oct. 17. Bennett will open the week of talks between senior civil servants of the 24 nations, which will provide ground work for the ministerial meetings the following and final week.

Bennett was invited to open the meetings as head of the government at the first provincial capital to hold the conference.

Hawden, who is Canada's high commissioner to Malaysia and Singapore and ambassador to Burma said, "to hold the meeting in Victoria emphasizes Canada's and British Columbia's increasing connections with the Pacific and Asian countries and underlines the importance of co-operation between all levels of government in carrying out Canada's foreign aid program."

Trudeau asked Bennett to do the honors in a personal telegram. Bennett replied he would be "glad to address the conference."

Rules 'Force' Hovercraft To End Run

Regular daily service to Nanaimo has been suspended by Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. of Vancouver because of a "limbo of operating regulations."

President Barry Jones said today expansion of service in southwestern B.C., including proposed Vancouver-Victoria runs, has been delayed until the area of operating regulations is clear.

The company's 20-passenger craft began Nanaimo service in February, intending to serve Victoria as well, but was not able to secure a landing site close in to the urban capital area.

Jones said the craft is meeting its Nanaimo requirements as far as specially reserved trips are concerned, and will do so for two weeks.

After that he hoped the licensing and regulatory problems will be cleared up.

A main problem, he said, has been the licensing of engineers. Other than factory representatives, Canadian regulations do not provide for Hovercraft engineers.

NO RULES

"It took 12 months to get a licence for a pilot," Jones said, hoping that licensed engineers would be provided for in less time.

Operating regulations also are absent, he charged. "It is impossible to apply Canada Steamship or Canadian Air regulations to Hovercraft."

It is difficult to plan the craft's work, too, Jones feels, because licensing for charter purposes is not clearly defined between provincial and federal authorities.

Jones said he hopes the firm will be able to operate as other carriers in the Gulf of Georgia area, but if not, Pacific Hovercraft will look to charter work in the Canadian Arctic, which has already been lined up.

Meanwhile, the craft sits idle for much of the time.

Police Union Changes

Sgt. Lorne Shandley, for 18 years president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, has stepped down.

New president, elected Tuesday night, is Const. Kenneth Horsman, who was recording secretary.

Arthur Mayse . . .

TODAY, I SUGGEST WE look in on a pair of high-calibre former executives, who are doing their best to help solve a problem which our community shares with others across Canada. Since these men insist on remaining anonymous, I can only introduce them as X and Y. Between them and with help from other volunteers, they operate a hard-trying service called the Housing Registry.

★

The job they took on for free in December of 1968 is to bring low-income renter and prospective landlord together. This, if you will permit me a massive under-statement, often requires a little doing.

X and Y receive no pay for their labors, although I believe that Greater Victoria Community Council of which the Housing Registry is a subcommittee, keeps their cars in gas.

Like the council itself, they look forward to an era of adequate housing for all, at which time the registry can quietly phase itself out of existence.

But right now, any such prospect is remote, and the task of matching too many applicants with too few rental properties grinds along.

As of Tuesday, the number of applications for rental quarters stood at 766, against 417 properties brought to Housing Registry attention. Known placements totalled 151, a figure that struck me as discouragingly low when I heard it.

D. Garth Homer, community council executive director, is convinced that the actual tally runs a good deal higher. By no means all of those whom the registry team assists without fee take time to report back when placed.

By way of further statistics, 87 applications were on file this morning and phone calls are averaging 24 a day.

Headquarters for this free service is Spencerhouse at 1951 Cook Street. There, registry co-directors X and Y occupy connecting offices which were achieved by cutting a doorway in a partition.

Floor space in each cubby measures seven by nine feet. Each contains a filing cabinet and a desk with phone on top and chair behind it, plus a second chair for callers. Let several house-hunting families arrive at the same time, and standing-room is at a premium.

★

A typical work-day may commence with a visit from a woman who explains that the house she and her husband rent has just been sold. They have a month to find another for themselves and their four children. Their income is limited: is there a place within their means on the housing registry list?

Like his partner, Director X runs his office with the efficiency he once gave to master-minding a responsible post in private industry.

Both men emerged from retirement to pilot this unpaid public service.

X comes up with a house that may fill the bill. It's no kitten, but it offers plenty of room. Rent is $125 a month; why not go out and have a a talk with the owner?

By this time, a young, married Indian from the wider British Columbia is waiting. He is enrolled at the Institute of Adult Education, his wife and children will soon be joining him, and he's having a hard time finding quarters.

(Chief Phillip Paul or Harry Dick, councillors to Indians for the Institute, sent him down to the registry. Good men both, who word hard for their people.)

The next applicant will like as not be an old-age pensioner, alone in the world, and in search of a housekeeping room. It must be warm, mind, and downtown so that he can drop in at the Silver Threads and, once in a while, go to an afternoon movie.

Before the day is much further along, the registry team will be involved singly or together in a case of the sort that turns up all too frequently.

A husband and father has deserted his wife and family. Here's the mother, sick-worried, with such resources as she possesses dwindling fast away. The rent where they are is beyond her means. They need an apartment not too far from schools and shopping centre.

Sometimes the housing registry men manage to turn up adequate shelter, and enjoy a brief moment of satisfaction. Again, their efforts may yield only failure and frustration.

Theirs is a tough job . . . after all, how many housekeeping rooms are available for an elderly woman with arthritis and a heart condition who can't climb stairs? (They found her one, after hard scouting).

But each day brings new problems to them and to the committee that backs and aids them. The chief problem is the one that has haunted them since, in a spirit of do-it-yourself, the venture was launched by the Community Council with municipal-provincial grants, and realtor support.

This is lack of sufficient listings to meet a need that will become acute before winter.

BASEMENTS FLOODED

Rush Hour Caught In Sudden Downpour

A sudden downpour drenched Greater Victoria this morning, flooding roads and basements and making driving hazardous for rush hour traffic.

Within a half hour, between 8:15 and 8:45 a.m., .35 inches of rain fell, the weather office said.

The deluge was preceded by dark clouds which almost turned dawn into night.

"If the downpour had continued for another half hour, it would have caused serious trouble," they said.

The city engineering department received a rash of calls from homeowners, complaining their basements were flooding.

Bill Jorgensen, assistant city engineer, said the flood was mainly caused by clogged drain pipes.

He said "ponding" also took place at many street intersections because drains were blocked with leaves.

"When visibility is as poor as it was during this downpour, lights should be turned on," he said.
